INTRODUCTION.

THE task of the genealogist, in groping his way amid the dusty records of the past, is much like that of the American Indian, in pursuing an obscure trail through a tangled wilderness. An acute faculty of perception, and a keen and practised eye, must note and scrutinize every obscure foot-print, every rustled leaf, every bent twig;—now progressing rapidly under a clear light, and guided by sure tokens; and anon, suddenly arrested by a total absence of all further signs, and forced hopelessly to abandon the trail, long and patiently pursued; until perchance again, some new and unexpected way-mark greets his eye, inspiring fresh pursuit.

It is easy to see why the vicissitudes, occurring in the progress of such a labor, should be highly exciting, as well as perplexing, and also, why it is, that a relish for it is sometimes acquired so ardent as to become almost a passion. Indeed, were it not for this kind of inspiration, but few, if any, of the valuable family genealogies, of which the last few years have been so prolific, would ever have seen the light; more especially as their preparation involves such a vast amount of patient labor as well as much expense, a remuneration for neither of which, can ever be reasonably expected.

The absence of any settled rule or custom, in the early towns of Connecticut, requiring the public registration of births, marriages and deaths, and the consequent silence of the records thereon, in so many cases, is a source of great embarrassment to the genealogist. Much of this data must now be gathered from ancient grave stones, old deeds, family papers and other fugitive memoranda, accidentally preserved and luckily discovered; while even much more that would have been most valuable, is now forever lost.

And, I am constrained to add, that my most formidable and vexatious embarrassments have occurred just where I least expected them. The ancient records were, at least, ever ready to disclose such information as they had; but the living descendants, to my surprise, have generally evinced a strange reticence to my urgent inquiries; not one in five of my letters and circulars eliciting any response whatever. Had the simple facts I sought, and which, in most cases, ten minutes labor would have supplied, been promptly sent me, nearly every family line could have been perfected, and at an earlier day. Most of the information, thus unavailingly sought, I have been enabled, after much delay and expense, to obtain through outside agencies, but quite too much remains unsupplied.

The prevailing indifference to ancestry or kinship, which seems a peculiar mark of our family, I can not regard as a commendable trait of character. That frame of mind which is entirely careless as is not a wholesome one; and from the judgment of those of the clan, who attach but little importance or value to this family Memorial, I appeal to their own posterity, confident that they will better appreciate the motives and labor, involved in its preparation.

"To whom related, or by whom begot,"

To this general indifference there are, however, many honorable exceptions; and to those genial spirits whose ready zeal has lent such essential aid, and whose warm, fraternal sympathy in the labor, has encouraged and cheered me on, my most grateful acknowledgments are due.

There is another reflection, altogether a pleasant one. The family, as a whole, is an honorable and good one; ranking quite above the average, in moral and social position. Standing as I have been, for several years, at the focal point of a widely extended family correspondence; gathering in the rays which have come to me from every State and Territory of the Union, I have been highly gratified with the abundant evidence of general intelligence, moral worth, and social standing, which has greeted me from every branch of the sept or clan. Although among us "one star differeth from another star in glory" the constellation is an effulgent one. We have also the gratifying assurance that our cis-atlantic progenitor, JAMES MORGAN, was an honest man; fearing God and keeping His commandments; honoring his King and serving his country, in high and important civil stations, in his day and generation; and his posterity have not disgraced the proud inheritance of his simple virtues.

The illustrative portraits have been selected from the various branches of the family, and are faithful copies from photographs of the respective parties represented. Of the general character of these portraits, in physique and intellectual expression, I have only this to say; that if any American volume of this kind, has ever exhibited a finer looking galaxy of representative heads, I have not yet seen it. For my own gratification, I have had them all set in an appropriate frame, with a copy of our oldest coat of arms, in proper colors in the center;—a family picture which I shall preserve and cherish, I confess with no little pride, as well as pleasure.

Nearly twenty-five years ago, circumstances excited my curiosity to trace back my lineage, if possible, to my first American ancestor. But as no one had ever before made even a partial attempt, and no record or family tradition concerning him had been preserved, I found the subject involved in such deep obscurity, that I was four or five years in hunting up the trail, and verifying, by unequivocal testimony, my pedigree from James Morgan, of New London; and in 1851, I printed a little pamphlet of this pedigree for private circulation among my own branch. This fact, when established, only gave me new zest for further inquiry, and the purpose began to grow upon me to trace down again, from James, all his male descendants, in their various diverging branches; and this purpose I have since pursued, steadily, silently and alone, with almost a passion, and with what success, is shown in this family volume.

Having brought these various lines down to the living generations, by the light alone of the ancient records, grave inscriptions, and other fragmentary links of evidence, gathered up with a zeal and patience akin to that of "Old Mortality," I issued a thousand or more circulars, and opened a wide correspondence by letter, appealing for family data to enable me to complete the modern branches down to the present time. The general neglect, with which that appeal has been met, has already been alluded to. I can account for it only by the fact, that these branches had become so utterly separated and alienated from each other, owing to the oblivion of all family history or tradition among us, that we had lost all interest in our common clanship. If this effort to remove this cloud of oblivion, and to recover our common history and origin, shall have the pleasant effect of again fraternizing the sept, and awakening new emotions of veneration for our common ancestry, I shall feel a double pride and pleasure in sending it down to our posterity, associated with my name.

Fully impressed with the importance of accuracy in a work like this, I have labored carefully to attain it; but it can not be reasonably expected, where so many names and dates are involved, that no errors, either in the record itself, or in transcribing, transfering, or printing, shall have crept in. More than 5,000 different persons are named in the volume, many of whose names are frequently repeated. Add to these the mass of occurring dates, and, in some measure, the caution and vigilance requisite to secure accuracy in each, can be appreciated. There may, in some cases, seem apparent errors, where really none exist; for it often happens that authorities disagree; members of the same family persisting in giving different dates; and sometimes the family register, the town record, and the tomb stone, each giving a different date for the same event. In such cases I have followed what appeared to be the best authority, often clearly verifying the true date by collateral circumstances. From a lack of carefulness in preparing the inscriptions of age upon tomb stones, and especially from the uncertainty upon the subject in cases where the parties have settled and died in sections distant from their nativity, and therefore isolated from the original records, the discrepancy between the true age, and the age thus inscribed, is a matter of much more frequent occurrence than is generally supposed.

And there may, possibly, be errors in some of the lines of descent, owing to the frequent occurrence of similar names of cotemporary date; as, for example, there were no less than eight Williams of the fifth generation, who were all about the same age, and settled in the same locality, several of whom had children whose names were also alike: and it has been sometimes an exceedingly laborious and perplexing problem to determine satisfactorily, from the records, to which particular family of antecedent Williams these children severally belonged. Every family line has, however, been carefully verified, and it is believed that each line of descent will be found reliable.

I think I may claim, for this work, a fuller statement of dates, and a more minute and complete detail of statistical facts, than is found in any other similar volume; and to accomplish this has indeed been by far the most laborious and difficult part of the task. Apprehending that this first effort to trace our early ancestry will also be the last and final one; and fully conscious that the inexorable "tooth of time" will soon demolish what is left of the fast-decaying records and other materials, I have sought very diligently and patiently to recover all that can now be saved, concerning our fathers, for future preservation. It would have been, comparatively, an easy task, when the public record of the will of an early ancestor, names for example, his wife, Mary, and children, John, Isaac and Hannah, to rest with these names only, as is usually done, and to follow up their history. But this by no means satisfied my purpose. What was the surname of wife, Mary? Whose daughter? When married and when did she die? What other children had they, who had died perhaps prior to the will, and therefore not named in it? What their names? When born and when did they die? Who and when did they marry? and what the history of all their descendants? It will be seen, at a glance, that a wide and laborious field of research is opened by this class of inquiries; and as the public records often afford no light, old family papers, letters and memoranda, must be resorted to, with a scrutiny, patient and persevering. But the satisfaction I now feel in this unusual completeness, more than compensates for the extra time and labor bestowed.

The generations are arranged separately, and follow each other in their order, as indicated by the running head title; but the tenth generation, few in number, is included under the title of the ninth.

The individual descendants, whose either parent was a Morgan, are numbered in consecutive order; the children of daughters, always in italics; but grand-children of daughters or their further descendants, are not numbered. Sons, for further history, are carried forward to the next generation, with their proper number suffixed in parenthesis. Such further notice of daughters and their descendants, as is given, follows immediately after the family register in which they first occur. It should therefore be noted, that the children of daughters belong to the generation next succeeding that under which they are found. Any particular lineage may be easily traced, either upward or downward, by simply referring, alternately, to the marginal numbers, and the numbers in parenthesis, of the line required. Take my own line for example, page 144, where N. H. is found with its No. (970) in parenthesis. This No. refers back to marginal No. 970, page 81, where N. H. is found to be a son of William A. who is No. (375,) in parenthesis. This in like manner refers back to marginal No. 375, page 45, where William A. is found again as a son of William, No. (163,) in parenthesis. This refers back to marginal No. 163, page 33, where he is found the son of William, No. (46,) in parenthesis, and this William is in the same manner found on page 25, a son of John, No. (4,) in parenthesis, who was son of James, No. 1, page 22.

The degree of kinship between any two of these descendants may also be readily found, by tracing both lines upward in like manner, until they unite in a common ancestor, and then noting, in a third column, the several degrees of kinship from that common ancestor, downwards, as in the following example; beginning with the highest numbers at the bottom.

What is the degree of kinship between Samuel Morgan, of Albany, No. (857) page 137, and myself, N. H. M. No. (970) page 144?

These examples, I trust, will render the plan of arrangement perfectly intelligible to all; and the solution of similar problems in kinship between different branches and descendants, may be a source of gratification and amusement. See also page 244 of Appendix.

The abbreviations are the usual ones, viz.; b. for born; d. died; m. married; s. son; dau. daughter; chi. child, or children; set. settled; res. resides, or resided; ab. about, &c.

The dates are given in "Old Style," as found on record, down to Sept. 1751, when the "New Style" was adopted in England; since then, where the dates were evidently continued in Old Style, I have endeavored to reduce all to the present notation. In the double dating, found in the early records of New England, between Jan. 1 and March 25, thus: Feb. 10th, $169\frac{8}{9}$ for 1699, I have followed the later date. The "Puritan year," as it was called, commenced with March 25th, which was termed "first month," April "second month," &c.; hence these double dates.

A genealogy of dry names and dates, can have but little interest to the general reader. It is said that when Doct. Noah Webster had got his first American Dictionary into print, he sent a copy to an old friend, not expecting a very erudite examination. In due time his friend acknowledged the compliment, with the remark, that the book seemed to abound in good words enough, but that he could not get the run of the story. The same criticism may be applied to volumes of this kind; and yet a writer in the N. Y. Evangelist, eloquently says:

"We were looking carelessly over a genealogy of the Minot family, in the second number of the New England Genealogical Register, when suddenly our eyes were suffused with tears, as they rested on the following sentence, in the catalogue of the children of Capt. John Minot, who died in Dorchester, 1669."

"MARTHA, b. 22 Sept. 1657, d. single, 23 Nov. 1678, age 21. She was engaged to be married, but d. unmarried, leaving a will in which she directed that at her funeral her betrothed husband, 'John Morgan, jun. be all over in mourning, and follow next after me.'"

"What a history is there in these few words about Martha Minot, who lived two centuries ago! The mind runs back in a moment, to those times when almost all New England was a wilderness; to those days of the old Indian wars, when no man could be a captain without being a man of some rank and consequence. Just after the close of King Phillip's war, when the settlements of New England were all in peace, Capt. John Minot's daughter, Martha, twenty-one years of age, and having come into possession of her share of the estate of her father, had plighted her troth to one she loved and expected to marry, when disease fastened upon her young frame and would not be repelled. In the chill November air, when she faded like a leaf. And at her burial there followed—nearer than brother or sister—nearest of all to the hearse—the one, whom of all others she most loved; from whom to part had been to her more painful than the death-pang; and who had been in her thoughts till "the love light in her eye," was extinguished in death. That single item in her funeral directions, that "John Morgan, jun. be all over in mourning and follow next after me," tells the whole story."

"The melancholy days were come, the saddest of the year;"

Nothing seems, at first sight, less interesting, or less instructive, than a genealogical table—a mere register of names and dates. But such a passage as that which is here quoted; so picturesque, so suggestive, so touching, so dramatic—when it occurs in the midst of these dry records, throws out an electric light at every link in the chain of the generations. Each of these names, in the table, is the memorial, perhaps the only memorial, of a human heart that once lived and died—a heart that kept its steady pulsations through some certain period of time, and then ceased to beat, and mouldered into dust. Each of these names is the memorial of an individual human life, that had its joys and sorrows, its cares and burdens, its affections and hopes, its conflicts and achievements, its opportunities, wasted or improved, and its hour of death. Each of these dates of "birth," "marriage," "death!" Oh! how significant! What a day was each of these to some human family, or to some circle of loving human hearts.

Our Name—its Origin and Antiquity.

In preparing this work I have made but little research for anterior transatlantic history. The name itself suggests its early Welsh origin, and history amply corroborates the suggestion. "Dixon, on Surnames," Boston edition, 1857, "for private distribution," thus translates it:

Morgan, (Welsh,) By sea, or By the sea; and in his "Supplement," 1858, Canada West, he adds that, "Big head, is a better interpretation, although it can be literally translated By sea, from Ceann mor," (Scotch.) Another plausible suggestion is, that it is derived from the Welsh words, More can, signifying Sea born. And still another theory, which at first appeared to me to be the most obvious and probable of all, attributes its origin to the Anglo Saxon words, morgen, or morgan, for morning; the name denoting generally, an "Eastern Light;" more accurately perhaps, a light or glow coming out from an Eastern sea. But this theory involves the anachronism of tracing to a Saxon root, a name now known to be older in Wales than the advent of the Saxon race or language in the British Islands. Its origin is undoubtedly Celtic.

Of its eminent claim to great, even the very highest antiquity, as a surname, there is no room for doubt. It was not only in common use, as such, at the date of the Norman Conquest, as appears from entries upon "Domes Day Book," and "Battle Roll," but for centuries before that event. Lower, in his "Dictionary of Family Names," has this paragraph; and this is the earliest instance of the use of a surname in England or Wales, which I find recorded in any history.

"MORGAN;—a Welsh name, of high antiquity. The founder of the Pelagian heresy, in the 4th century [about A. D. 360,] was a true Welshman, a monk of Bangor. His name was Morgan, which signifies, "of the sea," and this was correctly latinized Pelagius." All other authorities agree in giving this name a like antiquity.

The general use of surnames was not assumed in England until about A. D. 1070, and was then introduced by the Normans, under William, the Conqueror; though some occasional hereditary surnames, among the old Anglo-Saxon and Welsh families, and among them our own, had existed, as is seen, for many centuries earlier. In Woodward's "History of Wales from the Earliest Times," accounts are given of several sovereign Welsh Princes, and petty Kings, of the name of Morgan; famous fellows in war, in their day, and formidable barriers against Anglo-Saxon domination and encroachment; some of them living as far back as A. D. 400. To one of these ancient Kings, Morgan, of Gla-Morgan, about A. D. 725, is accredited the invention and adoption of the "trial by jury;" which he called "The Apostolic Law;" for, quoth our regal and pious namesake,—as Christ and his twelve Apostles, were finally to judge the world,—so human tribunals should be composed of the King and twelve wise men. And this, it is seen, was a century and a half prior to the reign of "Alfred the Great," who is generally accredited as the first founder of this form of trial. "Honor to whom honor is due."

Consanguinei.

There is an error in the popular notion that the transmission of a family name, transmits also its peculiar kinship, or corresponding relation by blood, or family stock. We say, that we are of the Morgan lineage and blood. True! as to the mere name,—but not at all true, as to the Morgan blood. It may seem a little ungracious to explode this pleasant fallacy, but the truth is, that we inherit no more of this blood than we do that of a thousand other bloods of different names. The son of the first, original, pure Morgan, would have been but a half blood; partaking equally, in theory at least, of the blood of his mother; and his sons, though bearing the distinctive name, would have inherited but one-fourth of the distinctive blood. Had the four grand-parents of our first American ancestor, James, been severally the first of their race, new creations of pure and unmixed blood, he himself would have been but a quarter-blood Morgan; and of equal kinship with each of his other three grand-parents. His descendants, of the second generation, only 1-8th blood; of the third, 1-16th; of the fourth, 1-32d; of the fifth, 1-64th; of the sixth, 1-128th; of the seventh, 1-256th; of the eighth, 1-512th; of the ninth, 1-1024th; and of the tenth generation, now living, only 1-2048th parts of the Morgan blood; all the other 2047 parts being derived from other sources. In twenty generations, or a period of about 600 years, computing the usual average of thirty years to a generation, the consanguinity, or relationship by blood, becomes less than one drop in a million; the distinctive name alone remaining. Exceptions arising from occasional intermarriages, may, in some few cases, vary the rule; but not favorably, for the direct tendency of such marriages is to deteriorate, and not to improve the blood.

"Pride of name," and "pride of blood," are thus seen to be very different sentiments. The one, when founded upon an eminent and virtuous lineage, is not only laudable, but virtue inspiring; the other, a baseless, shallow conceit, without a shadow of foundation for its support.

Surely this fact ought effectually to silence every vain-glorious boast of nobler physical, mental or moral endowments,—or "better blood," derived from any mere agnatic or paternal line of ancestry, than mingles in common veins. This pretentious, but empty bubble, bursts, as is seen, upon the slightest touch.

But as surely, on the other hand, when a name, which has been borne steadily aloft, in honor, through a long line of virtuous ancestry, is transmitted to us to wear, thus adorned with all these accumulated memories, it is our imperative duty to sustain it with true and manly port and bearing; to bear it still aloft and in honor; and he, who is beyond the reach of these noble and inspiring influences, is indeed a degenerate scion, and all unworthy of his name.

Family Coat of Arms.

Several of my correspondents have alluded to traditional "coats of arms" of the Morgan name, and some rude copies are still preserved, which, although differing from each other in artistic appendages and adornment, and sometimes in crest, are all alike in color of shield and main device; an escutcheon in green, bearing a lion, rampant, in gold.

At the risk of seeming pretentious of some special attainment in heraldic lore—a pretense which might excite a smile around my fireside, united in by myself, I nevertheless feel forced by these numerous inquiries to venture a few words upon this subject; and to show, to the curious in such matters, that our family can boast, not only in common with almost every family in our land, of its "traditional coat of arms," but of real, genuine, well authenticated ones, "as plenty as blackberries." Burke, in his "Encyclopedia of Heraldry," describes no less than fifty-five different coats of arms, which have belonged by grant, to various persons of our family name; and Berry, in his "Encyclopedia Heraldica," gives thirty-six; many of them in addition to Burke's list; from which I select a few, as samples, giving under each, in parenthesis, a pretty free translation, as best I can, of the heraldic terms.

MORGAN—ar—a lion rampant—sa—ducally crowned—or.

(On a silver shield, or escutcheon, a black lion, standing erect upon his hind legs, with paws extended, and with a gold crown upon his head. Granted 27 May, 1602, to William Morgan, of Blackmere.

MORGAN, [Wales]—or—a griffin, segreant, sa.—on his breast a rose, gu.—

(On a gold shield, a winged, imaginary beast, raised upon his hind legs, wings black, elevated, pointed upward, with a red rose on his breast.)

MORGAN, [WALES]—ar—three bulls heads, sa—armed, or.

(On a silver shield, three black bull's heads, with horns of gold.)

MORGAN, [Wales]—sa—a chevron between three spear heads, ar—points embrued, ppr—

(Across a black shield, two broad bands uniting at the top at right angles, in form of rafters, or like the military device upon a corporal's sleeve, between three spear heads of silver, with their points natural blood color.)

MORGAN, [Wales]—Per pale—az. and gu.—three lions rampant, ar—

MORGAN—Or—a fesse, wavy, sa—in chief, two eagles, displayed, sa—crest, a demi eagle displayed, or—charged on body with a fesse, wavy sa—

(Across the middle of a gold shield, a broad, horizontal black bar, in waving lines; above it, two black eagles with wings spread. On the top, or crown of the shield, as a crest, the upper half of an eagle, in gold, wings spread, and across it, another broad, black, wavy bar, running horizontally.) Rather a showy device, and granted 25 March, 1558, to Hugh Morgan, of London.

One more sample from the English side, must suffice here, and to this I beg to call the attention of our family.

MORGAN [Monmouthshire]—Vert—a lion rampant, or—

(On a green shield, a gold lion, erect on hind legs.)

I add now a sample of our American "traditional" ones, from an old copy now before me, and which some of our family will recognize.

MORGAN—Vert—a lion rampant, or—

(On a green shield, a gold lion, erect on hind legs.)

It is seen that the last two are identical in description of armorial device and bearing, and as our American progenitor, James, came from the immediate vicinity of Monmouthshire, near the border line of Wales, a fair presumption is raised that, this "traditional" coat of arms, is the legiti-mate inheritance of our particular family. The copy before me has, however, added to it, probably by the fancy of some ambitious artist, a highly ornate scroll border in gold; crest, a helmet with closed vizor; shield and helmet crowned with a floral coronal, green and red; with the family name inscribed on the scroll at the bottom, in place of the usual motto; the whole, making rather a showy display. See also pages 93–96 and 193.

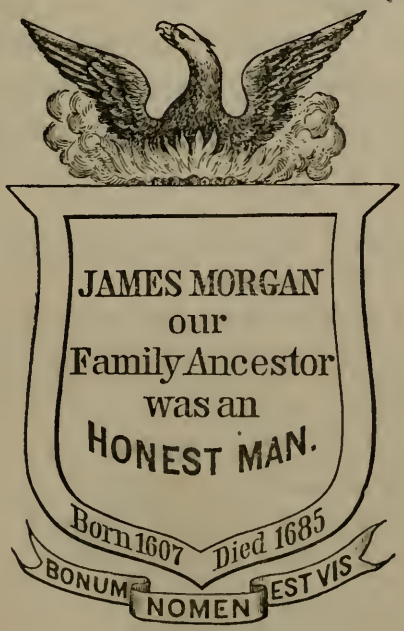
After the foregoing free translation, it may not be necessary to explain further, and yet it may serve to render it a little more clear, by observing, that the short terms, or abbreviations used above are, in heraldry—or, for gold—ar. argent, silver—sa. sable, black,—gu. gules, red—az. azure, blue—vert. green—tenne, orange—ppr. proper, or of natural color and form.

If now there are those of our family, eager for heraldic display, the foregoing samples, all fully authentic, are freely proffered for their selection; and if too fastidious for this assortment, they are respectfully referred to Burke and Berry, before cited, and to Edmundson and other authorities, where they will find armorial devices, belonging to the name of MORGAN, amply sufficient in variety to satisfy the most capricious taste, and the highest aspiration, even should they require a different "coat of arms," to display upon each and every button of their jackets.

As for myself, however, if I am to exercise the privilege of displaying a coat of arms, emblazoned on shield or panel, or graven on seal or signet, or of holding it filially enshrined in heart or memory, let it be this;—



KINSMEN OF THE NAME!

You I invoke!—To you I now make an appeal. "Hear me for my cause."

On the spot where our first American ancestor reared his humble abode, in the ancient land of the Pequots, now the town of Groton, and where an unbroken succession of his line, each bearing his own honored name of JAMES MORGAN, have continued to dwell, even unto this generation; there, on that hallowed spot, repose the ashes, not only of himself and of his good wife, MARGERY, but also of his children, and grand-children;—the patriarchs and mothers of us all. Time has well nigh obliterated from the little, rude and crumbling head stones the name, the date, and the story; but by the flickering light of tradition, of old records, and of broken inscriptions, I have been enabled, recently, amid the tangled thorns which enshroud them, to trace out and identify every grave.

Now is the day, and we are the men, to mark more suitably this their last resting place, and thus save from oblivion the story and the memory of this hallowed ground. Ours is the privilege, and ours the duty, to consecrate anew this ancient Necropolis of our family, by erecting thereon, to the remembrance of these our sires and mothers, a fitting and enduring monument, worthy of them and worthy of ourselves. Shall this be done?

Have we the motive? These mouldering graves appeal with silent eloquence to the living.

"E'en from the tomb the voice of nature cries!"

Have we the means? Our family is conspicuously marked for its wealth?

Have we the wish? the filial desire to preserve and venerate the memory of this sacred ground?

Let a monument, be the answer; and let me read it ere I go hence.

55 GROVE STREET, HARTFORD, CONN.
January 1, 1869.

JAMES MORGAN OF NEW LONDON,

AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

"Like leaves on trees the race of man is found;
Now green in youth, now withering on the ground.
Another race the following spring supplies;
They fall successive, and successive rise.
So generations in their course decay;
So flourish these when those have passed away."
Speech to Diomede, Homer, Book VI.

James Morgan, the common ancestor of a numerous family now scattered widely over nearly or quite, every state and territory of the United States, was born in Wales, in 1607, but in what precise locality our honest progenitor first saw the light is uncertain, though probably in Llandaff, Glamorgan Co. The family appears to have removed from Llandaff to Bristol, Eng. on the opposite side of Bristol Channel, a short time at least, perhaps a few years, prior to 1636. The name of his father is unknown, but there is some traditionary evidence that it was William.*

That year, 1636, in the month of March, he and two younger brothers, John and Miles, sailed from Bristol and arrived at Boston, Mass. in April following.

John Morgan, his next younger brother, who from tradition appears to have been a high churchman and to have exceedingly disliked the austerity of the Puritans, left Boston in disgust for more congenial society in Virginia, soon after their arrival. How far the Morgans of Virginia are descended from him I am unable to say.

Miles Morgan, the youngest brother, born in 1615, on his arrival at Boston, or soon after, joined a party of emigrants, mostly from Roxbury, of whom Col. Wm Pyncheon was at the head, and founded the settlement of Springfield, Mass.

* See William, No. 46.

He is said to have been under 21 years of age at the commencement of this settlement, and to have suppressed the fact of his minority in order to share in the drawing for house lots, which minors were not privileged to do. It is certain that he drew a house lot and afterwards built upon it; and it was the homestead of himself during his life, and of his descendants for many years after. It was situated upon the south side of "Ferry Lane," and in 1845 was sold by the Brewer family to the Conn. River Railroad Co.; their tracks now covering the original lot, and their repair shop standing upon the site of the old Morgan homestead.

He married, about 1643, Prudence Gilbert, of Beverly, Mass., who was a fellow passenger with him in the voyage from England. Of this courtship and marriage, an interesting and curious account is preserved. He had 8 children by this marriage, 4 sons and 4 daughters; and his wife, Prudence, dying 14 Nov. 1660, he next married Elizabeth Bliss, of Springfield, 15 Feb. 1670, dau. of Thomas, by whom he had 1 son only. His children by Prudence were, Mary, b. 14 Dec. 1644; Jonathan, 16 Sept. 1646; David, 23 July, 1648; Pelatiah, 17 May, 1650; Isaac, 17 March, 1652; Lydia, 8 Feb. 1654; Hannah, 11 Feb. 1656; Mercy, 18 May, 1658; and by 2d wife, Nathaniel, 14 June, 1671.

This family of Miles Morgan* has numerous descendants in New England and the western states. The wife of James Goodwin, Esq. of Hartford, Pres. of the Conn. Mutual Life Ins. Co. and her brother Junius S. Morgan, banker of London, one of the celebrated firm of George Peabody and Co. are among these descendants. Their father, Joseph Morgan, was the long and widely renowned hotel keeper at Hartford. Homer Morgan, banker and broker of N. Y. city, is also a descendant.

Tradition has preserved many anecdotes and events illustrating the prowess and sagacity of this old Nimrod and his five stalwart sons in early Indian warfare. In 1675, when Springfield was attacked and some thirty dwellings, besides barns and other buildings, were burnt by the Indians, a desperate attempt was made upon the dwelling of this dreaded veteran and his sons, but all advances were met with such cool intrepidity and deadly aim, from every window and loophole, by these practiced marksmen, that the astounded savages were forced to retire, leaving numbers of their foremost warriors dead upon the field, whose bodies they dared not attempt to recover from under the sure aim of the fatal rifle. One of these sons, Pelatiah, was the next year, 1676, killed by the Indians, on the west side of the river, at what is now Chicopee, age 26.

Miles Morgan died 28 May, 1699, age 84 years.

* See Appendix.

James Morgan, the elder brother, and our lineal ancestor, may have settled first at Plymouth according to doubtful family tradition, but when he removed there, if at all, or how long he remained, or of his history while there, I have no account.

Wherever he settled at first, he is found in Roxbury, near Boston, before 1640. That year, Aug. 6, 1640, he married there, Margery Hill, of Roxbury. His eldest daughter, Hannah, was born there 18 May, 1642, and all his 5 other children, except perhaps the youngest, who d. in infancy, were also probably born there. He was made a freeman there 10 May, 1643. He is named as a resident there in the inventory of John Graves, 1646, and was a freeholder there as late as 1650, the same year that he removed to Pequot, (now N. London,) and had a houselot assigned him there.

It has been heretofore supposed, by myself as well as others, that James Morgan was one of the party of emigrants called the "Cape Ann Company," who came to N. London in 1650, from Gloucester, Cape Ann, Mass. consisting of the Rev. Richard Blinman and several members of his society and church at Cape Ann. Miss Caulkins, in her very faithful, able and interesting "History of New London," has considered him as one of that Cape Ann party; but the evidence is now decidedly against it, for in addition to the facts above recited, showing him to have resided at Roxbury for at least the ten years prior to his removal to N. London, we have the following evidence, showing quite conclusively, as it appears to me, that he was never a resident of Gloucester. Babson, in his minute and excellent "History of Gloucester," gives from the town records a full and complete list of all the early proprietors and settlers of that town from its commencement down to 1650, but makes no mention of his name. He also gives the names of all those who removed from Gloucester to N. London about 1650, 13 in all, but there is no James Morgan among them. I am therefore fully persuaded that he was a settler and freeholder at Roxbury, and thence in 1650 removed to N. London.

Early in that year he had lands granted him at Pequot, as the N. London records show, which were soon after occupied by him as a homestead, "on the path to New street," [now Ashcraft street;] and a further entry upon the record shows that "James Morgan hath given him about 6 acres of upland, where the wigwams were, in the path that goes from his house towards Culvers, among the rocky hills." These tracts were located near the present third burial ground, in the western suburbs of the city of New London; a location sterile and dreary, and which in a few years was abandoned by its occupants for homes and broader lands of fairer promise, on the east side of the river Thames.

He continued to occupy this homestead on the path to New street, or "Cape Ann Lane," as it was called, in honor of the Cape Ann company, who chiefly settled there, until about March, 1657. On the 25 day of Dec. 1656, he sold his homestead and removed soon after, with several others, across the river, upon large tracts of land previously granted them by the town, upon the east side, now the south part of Groton. James Avery, William Meades, and Nehemiah and John Smith, who also had grants of land adjoining to him, were among the first settlers, and the earliest resident farmers upon the east side, now Groton. Grants of land had been made from time to time after 1652–3, by the colony at Pequot, with a liberal hand, upon the east side of the river, comprising the fertile regions of what is now the southern portions of Groton, and these lands were soon after occupied generally by the several proprietors.

May 17, 1649. The General Court or Colonial Assembly at Hartford, "graunted that ye bounds of ye plantation of Pequett shall be foure myles on each side of ye Great Riuer [Thames] and six myles from ye sea northward into ye country—Provided that ye aforesaide bounds bee not distributed to less than forty familyes."

March 11, 1657, by act of the "General Court," the settlement at Pequot was named "New London in memory of ye renowned Citty of London," and embraced not only what has since been divided and subdivided into several towns on the west side of the river, but also what are now the towns of Groton and Ledyard, on the east side.

It was upon the east side, as we have seen, that James Morgan early settled, and in a rude log cabin, with his wife and family of three sons and a daughter; and this territory, made the separate town of Groton, May, 1705, and again divided, by setting off the town of Ledyard in 1836, has ever been, and still remains the prolific hive of our name and family.

He was a large proprietor and dealer in lands; distinguished in public enterprize; often employed by the public in land surveys, establishing highways, determining boundaries, adjusting civil difficulties as a magistrate, and ecclesiastical difficulties as a good neighbor and a Christian man, in whom all appear to have reposed a marked degree of confidence and trust.

He was one of the "townsmen" or selectmen of N. London for several years, and was one of the first "Deputy's" sent from N. London plantations to the General Court at Hartford, May session, 1657, (at which date he deposed his age to be "about 50 years;") and was nine times afterwards chosen a member of that grave and important assembly, the last time in 1670. His associates and compeers composing the General Court or Colonial Assembly, in May, 1657, when he was first chosen, were John Winthrop, Esq. [of Pequot,] Governor.

Thomas Welles, Esq. [of Hartford,] Deputy Governor.

The names and places above in brackets, are not found in Colonial Records, but I have taken much pains to supply them from other sources, in order to show historically, who they really were, and what towns or plantations then composed the colony of Conn. and were represented. It is seen that Southampton, on Long Island, was one of these plantations.

To this carefully selected body of men, was intrusted the whole sovereign power of the colony, and the administration of its government, in every department, civil, criminal, ecclesiastical and military; embracing original jurisdiction of the most trifling as well as most heinous offences and causes of action, and the minutest details in every department.

James Morgan seems to have impressed this grave body of men with a high sense of his sterling honesty and integrity of character, and it appears that in a controversy between the General Court and the N. London plantation, about boundaries and jurisdiction, it was ordered that the matter should be submitted to three arbiters, mutually agreed upon. N. London at once named their own townsman, James Morgan, really a party in their own interests, but nevertheless the General Court as promptly accepted him, and without naming another, agreed to submit to his sole decision, which when made, seems to have satisfied all parties.

He was an active and useful member of the church under Rev. Richard Blinman's ministry, and his name is prominent in every important movement or proceeding.

"James Morgan, Mr. Tinker and Obadiah Brown, are chosen to seat the people in the meeting house, which they doing, the inhabitants are to rest silent." MINUTES FROM THE RECORD.

In 1661, he was one of a committee of the General Court to lay out the bounds of N. London, "on the east side of the Great River."

In 1662, he was one of a committee to contract "for building a house for the ministry," at New London.

From about this time he signs his name "James Morgan senior of New London,"—his oldest son James, afterwards Capt. James, being then near 21 years of age.

This year, 1662, his list on the town assessment, stands the third highest in amount; and among the tax payers of that year, about one hundred in number, only seven had a list exceeding £200. James Morgan's list was only £250, but this was a large estate in those primitive days.

The spot where he first built his house in Groton in 1657, and where he ever afterwards resided, and where he died, is a few rods southeast of the present dwelling (1868) of Elijah S. Morgan, about 3 miles from Groton Ferry, on the road to Poquonoc Bridge; and this patriarchal homestead from that day down to the present occupant, has descended by inheritance, through an unbroken line of James Morgan's, for six generations. And it is worthy of notice, in connection with this fact, that for eight generations as they hereinafter succeed each other, in regular order of individual precedence, each one is headed by the name of James Morgan.

He died in 1685, aged 78 years, and his estate was divided soon after his death among his four surviving children.

Capt. JAMES, (3) b. 3 Mch, 1644, s. of James,

m. "Mary Vine of Old England," Nov. 1666, died 8 Dec. 1711, age 68. His wife Mary died in 1689, of the "throat distemper," so called, a terri ble epidemic which prevailed throughout the country that year, especially in the months of July and August, visiting nearly every family and carrying consternation and death in its trail. She was born in England in 1641, and was 48 years old when she died. After her death he married 2d wife Hannah ———, born in 1640, who d. in 1711, aged 71, a few days only before his own death, but after the date of his will, in which he calls her his "dear and loving wife."

His will is dated in Groton 25 June, 1708, and approved in probate 22 Jan. 1712. In it he bequeaths to his "dear and loving wife Hannah Morgan," his "horse and chaise," barn, and orchard by it, and "the lower field this side of the cross fence which joineth south brook," to enjoy during her life. To his son James, his "field;" one half the barn and all his land at home, subject to the joint control and use of his widow, so long as she so remained. Also to James a lot "in the plain," near the salt marsh, "on the north side of the island." To his son William, "the land he has already a deed of," and 100 acres and one little island in Packanacock plain," that is, my sons Jas and Wm shall have equally." To his "four daughters, Mercy, [record of birth says Mary,] Hannah, Elizabeth and Jerusha," all his cattle, horses and sheep, to be equally divided between them. To his "grandson James Morgan," his saddle, bridle and short gun, and to his "grandson Wm Morg n," his musket.

He was an active member and one of the two first deacons of the first church in Groton; was the principal magistrate, and transacted the chief part of the civil business around him, for many years. At the first town meeting held after the town was incorporated, in Dec. 1705, he was the moderator, and was chosen first townsman or selectman. He was moderator of nearly every town or society meeting until near his death in 1711, and after that for many years his place as moderator was supplied by his two sons, Deacon James and Lieut. John, sometimes the one acting and sometimes the other. He was chosen captain of the first "train band" in Groton, in 1692, under an order of the Governor and Council, authorizing a military company to be formed there, and had been then two years a captain and commander of the "dragoon" force of New London county, under a special commission from the General Court.

Like his father he was one of the Deputies to the General Court from New London from 1689 to 1700, and afterwards one of the first Deputies from the new town of Groton, in 1706; and for several years was a Commissioner to advise and direct the Pequot tribe of Indians in the management of their affairs.

The military titles of these early days, even down to that of ensign, or sergeant, were esteemed as marks of high distinction, and from their peculiar importance, and the care and caution with which the officers were chosen, very justly so. These infant plantations were surrounded by hostile tribes of Indians, overwhelming in numbers; exposed constantly to the inroads of prowling bands, often irritated and always treacherous, and their very existence as well as peace and safety, depended much upon the personal character, the wise sagacity, prudent counsel and conduct, and the cool intrepidity of these chosen military guardians. Hence it was the early practice, when the leading officers of these "train bands" were to be chosen, to open the proceedings by solemn proclamation and prayer, and sometimes a special sermon for the occasion was prepared and preached to the company by their minister.

Capt. James lived and died upon the old patriarchal homestead of his father James, already described.

One of his daughters, Mrs. Turner, was 100 years and 7 months old. In the family of his son Jonathan, the father, mother and four children averaged 90 years of age. The third Jonathan lived to be 95, and his brother, Capt. Jared Starr, to his 90th year. A similar length of years characterized their partners in marriage. Mrs. Mary (Seabury) Starr lived to the age of 99 years; and Elizabeth, relict of Capt. Joseph Starr, of Groton, (brother of Jonathan 2d,) died at the age of 101 years, 4 months and 8 days."

Theophilus Eaton, by whom he had 8 children, in all 15. He removed to Preston about 1692, and died in 1712, aged 67. In his will dated 23 Aug. 1711, proved 12 Feb. 1712, he names his wife Elizabeth and 13 of his children as then living, but it is singular that he makes no mention of his son Joseph, born 1701, who afterwards settled in what is now Preston, m. Ruth Brewster and reared a family of children. The record shows that the probate of this will was appealed from, and in the litigation which followed, this Joseph is mentioned as one of the parties. I had a reference to the case and intended to examine it, but lost or mislaid the reference. He also like his father and brother James, was a prominent public man, Indian commissioner and adviser, deputy to the General Court in 1690 from New London, and in 1693–4 from Preston.

He continued pastor of this church till 1724, and died in Dec. of the year following. He was emphatically of a clerical lineage and family. His father was the Rev. John Woodbridge, of Killingworth; his grandfather was Rev. John Woodbridge, of Wiltshire, Eng., who died 1695, in Newbury, Mass.; his great-grandfather was Rev. John Woodbridge, of Stanton, Eng., and he had a brother, Rev. John Woodbridge, first minister at West Springfield, Mass., who had a son Rev. John Woodbridge. He had no son John to succeed him, but one of his grandsons, bearing his own name, Rev. Ephraim Woodbridge, born in Groton, was ordained a minister at New London, 11 Oct. 1769.

The farm he owned and occupied, and upon which his descendants lived after him, is now owned and occupied by Albert G. Ayres, Esq., whose mother, Abby, was a dau. of Daniel Morgan, (313.) He was among the first settlers of Preston, then a part of Norwich, and in 1686, was one of the petitioners for its separation as a town. It was set off from Norwich Jan. 1687, and that year Owaneco, Indian sachem, executed to him and others a quit-claim deed of all the town territory. This male line is probably extinct;—see further account of his son, Rev. Joseph.

Martha, (69) m. Joseph Perkins, son of Jacob, of Norwich, 22 May, 1700, and had 13 children, 11 of whom were living at the death of their father, 6 Sept. 1726. She was the mother of a successive line of three generations of Doctors of the Perkins name, of marked ability and eminence in their profession. Doct. Elisha Perkins, of New London, afterwards of New York, the inventor of the celebrated "Metallic Tractors," which for a time made so much noise in the medical world, as a remedial agent and cure for diseases, was one of her descendants. The "war of the doctors" about the merits of this invention, was exceedingly fierce and sharp, at home and in Europe, and gave birth to "Terrible Tractoration; a Poetical Petition, by Christopher Caustic," published in London; one of the keenest and wittiest brochures of poetical satire in the English language.

GENERATION IV.

"Stern tide of human Time! that know'st not rest,
But, sweeping from the cradle to the tomb,
Bear'st ever downward on thy dusky breast,
Successive generations to their doom." Scott.

Deacon JAMES, (8) b. 6 Feb. 1667, s. of James 2d, m. Hannah ———, who was the mother of all his 4 children, and who died about 1720. He next m. Anna ———, b. 1684, who died his widow, 17 June, 1751, age 67. He lived on the old noted homestead of his father and grandfather, in South Groton, and died there, 4 May, 1748, age 81. He, like his father, was an active and useful man in all church and civil affairs, drafting and taking acknowledgments of deeds, wills, and other legal instruments, as the principal and almost sole acting magistrate, and until a short period before his death, his name appears generally as moderator in all town or society meetings. In his will dated 29 March, 1745, he names the four children which follow, and as this will relates to and describes the patriarchal old homestead alluded to as having descended through six successive James Morgans in lineal order, and was evidently drawn up by himself, I give it entire.

"In the name of God, Amen;

I, James Morgan, of Groton, New London Co. being weak in body, but of sound mind and memory, do give unto my loving wife, one third part of my moveable estate, to be hers so long as she remains my widow. My will is that she improve and enjoy the eastermost part of my dwelling, that is to say, the old room, the bed room, the milk house and the cellar, and also the chamber over, and the garret. Also that she improve, possess and enjoy, during her widowhood, the tract of land butted and bounded as follows: beginning at the brook near my house, where the stones are laid to draw water, thence running in a direct line to the south bars of the eastmost of my orchard, till it bear northwardly, and so northwardly with the stone wall and ledge that make my field fence, till it comes to the end of a piece of stone wall standing on the top of the ledge, thence running about southeast on a ledge, to a heap of stones, lying on the south part of the ledge, thence about southerly to a wild cherry tree which stands by the brook, at the first bounds, which tract of land is supposed to contain about 14 acres, more or less. Also the benefit of all the fruit growing in the orchard, included in the bounds above, and also the liberty to pasture her creatures in summer season, in my great pasture, during her widowhood.

Also it is my will that my wife shall take one of my servants, which she pleases, at inventory price, in part of her thirds.

I give unto my son James Morgan, all my lands and buildings in Groton, excepting as above given to my widow, he my son, paying the legacies as I shall direct, within one year after my death.

I give unto my son Daniel, 10 pounds, to be paid him by my son James, and one-half my wearing apparel; he my son Daniel having already had his portion out of my estate.

I give to my daughter, Mary Gallup, 150 pounds, to be paid by my son James; and also one-third of my moveable estate.

I give unto the heirs of my daughter, Anna Owen, deceased, 150 pounds, to be paid them by my son James; also one-third of my moveable estate.

I appoint my son, James Morgan, my executor of this my last will and testament.

March 29, 1747. James Morgan. [seal.]"

The above bounds are readily cognizable at the present day, and the location has been already described in the notice of its original occupant, James 1.

CHILDREN.

92. James, 1693, m. Mary Morgan, (128.)
93. Daniel, ab. 1695, m. Eliz. Williams; 2. E. Alcott, and 3d and 4th wife.
94. Mary, about 1697, m. ——— Gallup.
95. Anna, about 1700, m. Rev. John Owen, 25 Nov. 1730.

Anna, (95) m. Rev. John Owen, the second minister of Groton, 25 Nov. 1730. He was ordained 22 Nov. 1727, and continued his ministry in the same church until his death in 1753. He was liberal and charitable in sentiment and conduct, and was sometimes thought to be so tolerant towards those who differed from him in doctrine, as to expose him to criticism and censure from the more rigid. But his course was ever peaceful, and his life a useful one. His grave stone in the old burying ground at Poquonoc, bears this significant inscription.

"The Reverend and Pious Mr. John Owen, the second ordained minister in Groton, died Lord's day morning, June 14, 1753, in ye 55th year of his age."

"God's Faithful Seer."

He is said, but upon doubtful authority, to have been a native of Ireland, but more probably was a descendant of John Owen, of Windsor, Ct., born 1624. He had by Anna 5 children, viz.

96 Anna Owen, born 1731, died 1734;—97 Mary Owen, 1734, m. Simeon Miner;—98 John Owen, 1736, grad. Yale Coll. 1756, never married, died 1801; for many years town clerk and teacher of the grammar school at New London;—99 Anna Owen, again, 1739;—and 100 Mahitabel Owen, 1741.

Deacon WILLIAM, (9) b. 4 March, 1669, s. of James 2d,

m. Margaret Avery, dau. of Capt. James, of Groton, 17 July, 1696. Both were members of the church at New London before the church at Groton, then New London, was founded, and their four elder children were baptized there by the Rev. Gurdon Saltonstall, afterwards governor of Connecticut. When the first church was established in Groton, 8 Nov. 1704, he was chosen one of the deacons, and the births of his later children are recorded there on the first records of the town. He died 25 Dec. 1750, aged 82, and his widow, Margaret, died in 1755, and her estate was settled that year.

Capt. JOHN, (38) b. 10 June, 1667, s. of John, m. Ruth Shapley, dau. of Benjamin and Mary (neé Picket) Shapley, of Groton, settled in Groton, and died between the date of his will 30 May, 1744, and its proof in Probate, 16 March, 1746, aged about 79. His wife, Ruth, died earlier, as she is named as his deceased wife, in his will, as also his dau. Ruth Brewster, deceased. All his other children are named as then living, except Experience, who probably died young. He left a large estate in lands and chattels, the latter of which he bequeathed to his daughters, but all his broad acres were given to his only son, John, and the eldest male heir in succession from him, in perpetual entail and undivisible to the end of time.

The following extract from his will may gratify those who are curious to learn the notions which were quite common in that day, regarding the entailment of estates.

"I give unto my only and dutiful son, John Morgan, all my lands that I hold by deed from my honored father, and also all the lands that I purchased of the town of New London, * * * by entails, that is to say, to him during life, and then to his eldest son, then surviving, and to the eldest male heir of my said son's eldest son, and so on in right line down through the eldest male heir, to the end of time, and never to be divided in case such male heir doth not fail."

He was chosen Lieut. of the first military company or "train band" of Groton, 30 of April, 1692, at the same time that his uncle, James Morgan, was chosen Capt. and he succeeded his uncle as Capt. 8 Oct. 1714, which office he held until 12 Oct. 1730, when Lieut. Christopher Avery was chosen in his place.

WILLIAM, (46) b. 1693, s. of John,

m. Mary Avery, dau. of Capt. James Avery, jun. of Groton, 3 July, 1716. He died Oct. 1729, age 36, and his wife, Mary, b. 1696, long outlived him, and died April, 1780, age 84.

There is a tradition that this William used to say that his father, John, had a very old little book, in which was written the name of "William Morgan, of Llandaff," (Wales,) and dated before A. D. 1600, who he said was the father of our first James, the emigrant.

There are other circumstances which strengthen the probabilities of this tradition. This William had also a pair of gold sleeve buttons of antique make, and having WM. rudely but plainly stamped on each, which were said to have come down as an "heir loom" from William, of Llandaff, and which came into my own possession from my father, William A. (375), and were long held by me as a precious relic, until stolen a few years ago. By great effort I discovered a trace of them soon after, but all too late to save them from the crucible of an innocent purchaser, by whom they had been melted with a common mass of old jewelry.

Capt. JOSEPH, (50) bap. 27 April, 1701, s. of John, m. Ruth Brewster, dau. of Nathaniel Brewster, of Duxbury, Mass. 8 May, 1735. He died in Preston, where he ever resided, 24 May, 1764, age 63. In his will dated at Preston, 1762, proved 21 Aug. 1764, he names 4 sons and 3 dau. as then living. His wife, Ruth, survived him, living to the age of 96 years, the latter part with her dau. Mary Noble, in Canaan, Ct., where she died and was buried in 1807. She was b. 9 Dec. 1711, and was evidently a direct descendant of Elder William Brewster, of the "May Flower" company, whose son, Jonathan, first settled in Duxbury, and left several children settled there, when he removed to New London. Capt. Joseph was commissioned 18 May, 1761, by Gov. Thomas Fitch, a captain of the train band of Preston, under King George the 3d, in the first year of his reign.

m. first in 1729, Elizabeth Sherman, of Newport, Rhode Island, by whom he had one son, Theophilus, and from whom he was subsequently divorced. He m. 2d, in March, 1745, Lydia, widow of Hezekiah Pierpont, and only child of Rev. Jacob Hemingway, the first minister of East Haven. He settled first in Guilford, on the east side of the "village green," about 1730, but before 1748 removed to Killingworth, now Clinton, where he died 22 Nov. 1766, age 63, and his widow, Lydia, died 27 May, 1779, age also 63. The house he occupied in Guilford is still standing, and known as the "old stone house." He was chosen captain of the first company of Killingworth, 15 March, 1756; was a merchant and land holder of distinction, and left a large estate. The Killingworth and Clinton Morgans are mostly descendants from him.

177. Amelia, 11 Dec. 1755, m. Dr. Lemuel Wheeler, of Salisbury; no child.

Rev. JOSEPH, (65) b. 6 Nov. 1671, s. of Joseph,

m. ——— ———. His name stands on the catalogue of Yale College as one of the graduates in the class of 1702, but he was probably not a regular graduate, and the degree of A. B. was doubtless conferred upon him as an honorary one, for according to the "History of Greenwich," Conn. he was settled over first church, Greenwich, in 1697, and in 1700, dismissed and settled over second church, Greenwich. He was also a regular preacher in Bedford, Westchester county, N. Y. in 1699, and was ordained by the Fairfield county association in 1700. From 1704 to 1708, he was again the minister at Greenwich, Ct. In 1709, he was settled as pastor of the Presbyterian church in Freehold, New Jersey, and in 1728, was charged before the Synod with "practising astrology, countenancing promiscuous dancing, and transgressing in drink." These charges were not sustained. He resigned, however, and took charge of the two churches, at Hopewell and Maidenhead, N. J. and in 1736, was again charged with intemperance, and suspended from the ministry, but was restored again in 1738, "on the intercession of many good people." He was a preacher of considerable note, and several of his discourses and sermons were published; among them, one on the death of his eldest son, Joseph, a graduate of Yale College, 1723, and died the same year; a "Reply to a Railer against the doctrine of Election," 1724; "Sin its own Punishment," 1728; and "Love to our Neighbors," third edition, 1749. The sermon on the death of his son was entitled "A Discourse at Freehold, in New Jersey, Upon the Sorrowful Occasion of the Death of the Young and very Hopeful JOSEPH MORGAN, of Yale College, B. A. who departed this Life the 28 of Nov. 1723." It was printed by Samuel Green, at New London, and presents nothing very striking, either in thought or style of expression.

In his letters dated at Freehold, in 1721 and 1722, he speaks of his two sons, one age 17, and the other 11, "as good scholars," and "one other son a little older;" this last evidently the Joseph whose death is above alluded to. Efforts have been made by several others as well as by myself, to trace the history of this Rev. Joseph Morgan to its close, and a further account of his posterity, but hitherto without success.

CHILDREN.

178. Joseph, about 1702, died 28 Nov. 1723, graduate Yale College, and at least two other sons, 179 born about 1705, and 180 about 1711, and perhaps other children; no further traces of either of whom have been found unless the Doct. John Morgan, professor in the Medical College, Philadelphia, whose history is given by Doctor Titus Morgan, [see APPENDIX,] was from this Joseph, either a son or grandson, an hypothesis which seems probable.

GENERATION V.

"There be of them that have left a name behind them, that their praises might be reported.

And some there be which have no memorial, who are perished as though they had never been; and are become as though they had never been born; and their children after them."—Ecclesiasticus [Apochrypha,] XLIV. 8, 9.

Deacon WILLIAM, (101) born 7 April, 1697, son of William, m. Hannah Stanton, 21 Sept. 1721, by whom he had four children, all daughters, and all of whom died without issue, and this line is extinct. He settled in Preston, then a part of Norwich, as early as 1740, or before, and was residing there until after 1760. His wife, Hannah, died there, 26 June, 1747, and he next married Sarah Seabury, of Groton, 24 Sept. 1747. He afterwards removed to Stonington borough, and died there, as his grave stone shows, 14 May, 1778, in his 82d year. His widow, Sarah, died, probably in July of the same year, as her will is dated 7 July, and Aug. 4, 1778, her place as her husband's executor was filled by a new appointment. Her will was proved in probate 1 Sept. 1778. There were no children by the second marriage.

His will, dated 12 July, 1790, proved 5 Dec. 1791, in Stonington Probate, names his wife, Mary, and all his children except Mary and William, as then living. His widow, Mary, was living, and signed a deed as late as 31 March, 1796. His father, William, in 1749, just before his own death, gave this son, Solomon, a deed of the family homestead in Groton, containing 250 acres of land, and he probably lived and died upon the place. It passed again by deed from him to his oldest son, Rev. Solomon, of Plainfield, in 1783, who never occupied it, and who afterwards conveyed it to his brother, Nathan. His tomb stone in the old family grave yard on the original patriarchal homestead bears this tribute to his memory: "Esteemed for his integrity, peaceableness and fidelity, and his Christian life and character."

ANNA, (212) m. Rev. Aaron Kinney, the minister at South Groton, 31 May, 1770, ordained Oct. 19, 1769, over the same church where Rev. Ephraim Woodbridge who m. Hannah Morgan (41) was settled in 1704, and Rev. John Owen, who m. Anna Morgan, (95) was settled in 1727. His ministry over this church continued until Nov. 5, 1798, over 29 years, when the state of his salary, totally inadequate to support his large family of young children and an invalid wife, led to a dismissal. "His subsequent life was filled with wanderings, trials and removals," and he died in 1824, in Ohio, aged 79. He and Anna had 11 children, viz.—217 Anna Kinney, born 1771, (m. Aaron Avery, and had Nancy and Ellsworth;)—218 Aaron Kinney, 1773;—219 Lucy Kinney, 1775;—220 Mary Kinney, 1777;—221 Lydia Kinney, 1780;—222 William Keeney, 1782;—223 Nathan Kinney, 1785;—224 Solomon Kinney, 1786;—225 Elisha Kinney, 1788;—226 Thomas Kinney, 1791;—and 227 Ashbel Kinney, 1798.

They were married by their brother in law, the Rev. Aaron Kinney, at South Groton.

Capt JOHN 3d, (129) b. 4 Jan. 1700, s. of John 2d,

m. Sarah Cobb, 17 April, 1728, settled in Groton, (now Ledyard,) d. Feb. 1771, age 71, and his wid. Sarah d. in 1780. His will is dated 15 Feb. 1771, proved in Stonington probate, 12 April, 1771, and mentions his wife, Sarah, and all the following children, except Elkanah, as then living. It is apparent from other indications that Elkanah was dead before 1764, and probably died early in life.

He was chosen Ensign of the N. East Co. of Groton, 11 Oct. 1736. Lieut. of the same Co. 26 Sept. 1738, and in 1844, Sept. 27, Captain; it being at the last date called the 4th Co. of Groton. When chosen Ensign, in Oct. 1736, Thomas Mumford was chosen Captain, and Wm. Williams, Lieut. Eight of the leading citizens of Groton, among them Capt. John Morgan, father of the Ensign, sent a remonstrance to the "General Court against granting commissions to these officers, because, as they allege, 1st, The two chief officers are young men of the church of England, 2d, Illegal votes were cast. 3d, The young men of the company were deluded with liquor. 4th, Many dissatisfied will enlist in the troop. 5th, The society is in difficulty on account of the church of England, and they are about to settle a minister."

The connection between choosing these officers and settling a minister, is not very obvious to the present age, at first view, but it should be remembered that our good old puritan ancestors, having at this period in their history, quelled all fear of the Pequots, were now greatly alarmed at the inroads of another, almost equally dreaded foe. Rev. Samuel Seabury, their first minister, after preaching among them ten Sabbaths, four at the house of this Capt. John Morgan, and four at the house of his brother, deacon William, gave notice of his becoming a convert to the Episcopal church. That at once terminated his stay among them. His successor, the Rev. Mr. Punderson, ordained 29 Dec. 1729, after preaching acceptably for five years without exciting suspicion of his faith or doctrines, astonished them all, on the first day of January, 1734, by suddenly avowing himself also a convert to this same "church of England." His connection was of course at once severed, and for the two years following they were without any minister. And now, after this sorrowful experience, they were just on the eve of settling the Rev. Andrew Croswell, (subsequently ordained 14 Oct. 1736,) as their third perilous experiment; and it should not be considered a subject for very flippant persiflage, or severe censure, if they were a little alarmed, lest the influence of their military leaders, as an open foe without, uniting with the influence of their ecclesiastical leaders as a covert foe within, should carry the puritanic citadel and lay waste the vineyards of their goodly Zion. The " General Court," however, after several days patient hearing of the parties at Hartford, together with a crowd of witnesses, much of whose testimony still appears in the minutes on record, finally decided against the remonstrants and granted the commissions; and the Rev. Mr. Croswell proving to be sound in the faith of his people, and a faithful sentinel upon their watch tower, no dire calamity followed.

ABIJAH, (143) b. 6 July, 1715, s. of Samuel, has left no trace on record which I have been able to discover, but while this work is in press, a letter from Ambrose Morgan, of Oswego, N. Y. raises a strong presumption that he is a descendant from this Abijah, as thus: his grandfather was Abijah, born about 1749, in New London co. Conn.; his father was Abijah, a carpenter, born at or near Colchester, Conn. probably about 1772, and he himself was born in Colchester, 5 Oct. 1795. I therefore engraft what I have been able to get in time, of his family, in this line of Abijah, being satisfied by the facts sent, and especially by the stated traditions of the family, that it belongs here.

GENERATION VI.

Time rolls his ceaseless course. The race of yore
Who danced our infancy upon their knee,
And told our marveling boyhood legends store,
Of their strange ventures, happ'd by land or sea,
How are they blotted from the things that be!
How few, all weak and withered of their force,
Wait on the verge of dark eternity,
Like stranded wrecks, the tide returning hoarse
To sweep them from our sight. Time rolls his ceaseless course."

SIMEON, (208) born 1754, son of Joseph.

On the memorable 6th day of September, 1781, when the single town of Groton was called to mourn the fall of no less than sixty-two of her best and bravest sons, butchered in the fort at Groton, by the British force under the infamous Arnold; and when twenty-four others belonging to the same town were more or less seriously wounded in the same affray, Corporal Simeon Morgan, of Groton, was among the victims who fell.

The records give no account of his birth, and the "place of his sepulchre," like that of "Moses of old," appeared utterly unknown. Nor could I learn from the oldest inhabitants of Groton, either from memory or tradition, any thing of his history, or even to what family he belonged, and it really seemed that the bare and doubtful record of his fall was all that was known or left concerning him. June 21, 1867, piloted by my ever obliging friend, Elisha Morgan, Esq. of Groton, we found, standing silent, solitary and desolate amidst the thick woods of Ledyard, the old family grave stones of Capt. Joseph Morgan, born 1706, his wife, Dorothy, and three of his sons, Joseph, William, and Ebenezer. While noting the names and dates upon these grave stones, and forcing our way through the tangled underbrush to obtain access to them, my friend accidentally observed near the grave of Ebenezer, the fragment of a stone imbedded in the soil, and almost covered from view by decayed vegetable mold and creeping vines. It attracted his keen scrutiny, and upon uncovering the surface and raising it up, it proved to be part of a grave stone, broken off, fallen and thus concealed by the gathering debris of time. It bore in rude letters on a slate stone, the following inscription:

"IN MEMORY OF SIMEON MORGAN, WHO DIED SEPT. 6, 1781,
IN FORT GRISWOLD, BY TRAITOR ARNOLD'S MURDERING CORPS,
IN YE 27TH YEAR OF HIS AGE.

THIS BLOOMING YOUTH IN SWEETS OF LIFE,
HIS GOD DOTH CALL WHILE CANNONS ROAR,
A WINGED DART DOTH SEASE HIS BREATH,
AND TAKES HIM FROM THIS GOLDEN SHORE."

And now, that his memory is thus recalled, and his lineage and place of sepulchre discovered, let me here record it, that it may be better preserved hereafter.

And I pray you, good Mr. Clerk of the town of Ledyard, that you dedicate one fair page of your public records, to the name and fate of this young martyr to Liberty, in fitting words of fair enscrollment.

And I pray you, worthy Selectmen, remembering that your town bears its name in honor of another martyr,—the heroic commander of the Fort on that sad day,—that you will mark, by a more enduring and conspicuous monument, the now neglected, forgotten, obscure and lonely spot, where this precious dust reposes.

Rev. SOLOMON, (210) born 4 Feb. 1745, son of Solomon, m. 1st, Eunice, dau. of Elder Park Avery, of Groton, about 1770. She died 2 May, 1793, in her 45th year, and he m. 2d, widow ——— Haskell, probably without issue; settled over Nazareth church, Sterling, formerly Voluntown, April, 1772, where he continued until Feb. 1784, according to Doct. Bacon, but more probably Feb. 1783, for in Sept. 1783, he was again settled over the church in Canterbury, where he continued pastor until March, 1797, and in April, 1798, he was settled as pastor of the church in North Canaan, Conn. where he remained until his death, 3 Sept. 1804, age 59. He perhaps preached again to his old charge in Voluntown between March, 1797, and April, 1798, as he is said to have gone from Nazareth church to North Canaan, in 1798. While he was settled over the church at Canterbury, from 1783 to 1797, he describes himself in his deeds and other papers, as of Plainfield adjoining. In 1784 "Rev. Solomon Morgan, of Canterbury," delivered at Groton, one of the first of a series of anniversary discourses, which were continued for several years, on the massacre at Groton fort. His will is dated 23 July, 1807, codicil added 7 May, 1811, proved 20 May, 1811, and names wife, Elizabeth, and all his children but Ezra and Hannah, as then living, but alludes to Nathan as being absent or missing, and provides that "if he do not return in 10 years," his share was to go to the other heirs.

Doct. Osgood was for 46 years a skillful and successful practitioner in Lebanon; was a representative in General Assembly; member of the State Senate, and better and of higher worth to me personally than all, was ever an efficient member of the board of school visitors in the country district where I attended school, and the only school I ever attended, often placing his kindly hand upon my head, and commending me to the master as a boy of some future promise; words of encouragement I have never forgotten, and never shall while memory lasts. He and his most estimable wife, both quite aged, now reside (1867,) in Norwich, Ct. My blessing on their time-frosted heads.

P. S. Almost before the ink of the last paragraph is dry, my eye rests upon the following notice:—"Died, in Norwich, Dec. 22, 1867, Doct. Erastus Osgood, in his 88th year." A well-merited tribute to his memory and sterling virtues accompanied the notice.

Col. CHRISTOPHER, (373) b. 27 Oct. 1747, s. of Wm. 2d, m. 1st, Deborah Ledyard, dau. of Youngs Ledyard, of Groton, 16 Feb. 1768, by whom he had 8 children. She was b. 19 May, 1749, and d. 22 April, 1807, age 58, and he m. 2d, Margaret Gates, dau. of Asahel Gates, of Groton, 3 April, 1808, and had 2 children. He d. 5 July, 1831, age 84, and his will was proved Aug. following, (Ston. prob.)

This good mother Deborah, must have been a woman of rare excellence of character, for her name and her virtues are still a sweet and cherished odor amid the fireside memories of her numerous descendants; and the name of Ledyard, as a baptismal name in honor of her, is still perpetuated and transmitted as an heir loom among them. She was the grand dau. of John Ledyard, of old England, who settled on Long Island, and married a dau. of Judge Youngs. He had 10 children, the eldest of whom, John Ledyard Jr. was the father of John Ledyard 3d, of Groton, the celebrated traveler of world wide renown. Three other of his sons were settled in Groton. Benjamin and Isaac Ledyard were there engaged in commercial pursuits, and had one of their vessels maliciously burnt, in New London harbor, Sept. 3, 1735, by its commander, Capt. Broadhurst, an Englishman. He was arrested and imprisoned for the act, but broke prison and escaped. Another son, Youngs Ledyard, father of our Deborah, settled in Groton, and mar. Mary Avery, of that town, June, 1748, when he was but 17, and she 18 years of age. He was b. 25 Jan. 1731, and d. 4 April, 1762, age 31 years, and his wife, Mary, was b. 20 Nov. 1730, and died 7 March, 1787, age 56. She m. Stephen Billings, of Groton, as her 2d husband. During the brief and early married life of Youngs and Mary, they had eight children, viz. our Deborah Ledyard, born 19 May, 1749, m. as above, Col. Christopher Morgan, d. 22 April, 1807; Youngs Ledyard Jr. 24 June, 1751, killed in Groton fort, 6 Sept. 1781, age 30; Benjamin Ledyard, 5 March, 1753, d. 9 Nov. 1803; Isaac Ledyard, 5 Nov. 1754, d. 30 Aug. 1803; Mary Ledyard, 3 Sept. 1758, m. ——— Fairman, and d. 30 May, 1806; William Ledyard, 11 March, 1760, d. 30 Jan. 1761; Lucy Ledyard, 5 July, 1761, m. ——— Phelps, and d. 10 Sept. 1796, and Caleb Ledyard, 18 Oct. 1762, lost at sea, 1781, age 19.

Col. William Ledyard, who commanded the fort at Groton, at the time of the bloody massacre of its heroic little garrison, by the British forces under the traitor Arnold, was the uncle of our Deborah. Another of her uncles, Ebenezer Ledyard, of Groton, one of the committee in charge of the construction of this fort, in 1775, was also one of its hapless garrison. He was taken prisoner and held to the close of the war, as an hostage for a body of wounded prisoners, left under parol. Capt. Youngs Ledyard, brother of our Deborah, and nephew of the Col. was in command of one of the companies of the garrison, and was slain. When Col. Ledyard surrendered the fort, he presented his sword to the British commander, in token of submission, but that officer on receiving it, immediately thrust it through the Colonel's body. Capt. Youngs Ledyard and his brave companions, on witnessing this cold blooded butchery, believing that no quarter or mercy was to be expected, and determined to avenge the barbarous act, and to sell their lives as dearly as possible, again rushed into combat, and were cut down and fell almost to a man, around the bloody corpse of their beloved commander.

A desire to learn something of the history of this Deborah, strongly expressed by some of her descendants, has induced me to give this genealogical and historical note of herself and some of her family connections.

Col. Christopher and wife, Deborah, settled and died in Groton, and all their children were born there. The more noted Morgans of middle and western New York, Christopher, formerly Secretary of that State, and his brother, Edwin B. both formerly members of Congress, and the present families of the name at Auburn and Aurora, and other prominent families of that state and elsewhere, are sprung from this worthy pair.

John Wightman was a descendant of Elder Valentine Wightman, the founder and father of the first society of Baptists in Groton, first exercising his "gifts" among a few willing hearers, and afterwards gathering a church, of which he was the pastor from 1710 to his death, June 9, 1747. His son, Rev. Timothy Wightman, occupied the same pulpit and office after him for 42 years, and until his death, 14 Nov. 1796, in his 78 year, and was succeeded by his son, Rev. John Gano Wightman, who filled the same office for nearly 45 years, and until his death, 13 July, 1841, aged 74. Such a period of ministry over the same church, held in succession by father, son and grandson, for a period of a hundred and thirty years, is believed to be without a parallel in the history of American churches.

Rev. Palmer G. Wightman, a grandson of Rev. John Gano Wightman, is still the pastor of this same church, but did not immediately succeed his grandfather, a period of three or four years intervening. Many of the descendants of Elder Valentine Wightman have filled the pastoral office.

Capt. WM. AVERY, (375) b. 24 Nov. 1754, s. of Wm. 2d,

m. 1st, Lydia Smith, dau. of Nathan Smith, of Groton, 4 May, 1776, by whom he had 13 children. She died 4 Jan. 1804, age 45, and he next m. Sarah Harris, dau. of Capt. Nathaniel Harris, of Colchester, now Salem, 10 June, 1804, and had 4 more children, making 17 in all, among whom my own name is found. All of these children except two, viz. Griswold, who died at sea, in his 21st year, and Sarah M. who died in her 15th year, lived to mature age and became heads of families. It was a common remark of our honored father, that he "had reared a family of 17 children, and had never had occasion to blush for the conduct of either of them." Seven of them are still living. He settled first in Groton, where 11 of his children were born, but removed to and settled in Colchester, (now Salem,) in March, 1796, where he resided until March, 1814, when he again removed to Lebanon, Conn. and died there, 22 March, 1842, age 88. Sarah, his widow, my honored mother, a woman of rare mental endowments, died in Hartford, 24 Nov. 1855, age 83. He was a sergeant in the war of the "Revolution," and present at the battle of Bunker Hill, June 17th, 1775, then in the 21st year of his age.

He was a man of good natural abilities, and of some reading; social and companionable in intercourse; fond of anecdote and repartee; of kind and genial sympathies; loved his friends and made them feel it. His smart rap striking one ear, and an apt witticism the other, at the same moment, often left his children in ludicrous doubt whether they were crying at the rap, or laughing at the wit.

It may be interesting to the present polyonomous generation, to note that this is the first instance in which more than one pre-nomen, or Christian name was ever used in our family. Formerly, children many, names few; latterly, children few, names many.

Capt. ISRAEL, (376) b. 22 July, 1757, s. of Wm. 2d,

m. Elizabeth Brewster; settled in Groton, now Ledyard, on one of the old heir-loom Morgan homesteads, now owned and occupied by John Brewster, Esq. one of his grandsons, where all his children were born. Upon this homestead there is quite an extensive family burying ground, substantially enclosed and well cared for by the present proprietor. All honor to him for his fraternal protection of this "God's acre." It lies in a romantic and sequestered valley, or basin, surrounded by an amphitheatre of hills and woodlands, and as I stood in this family Necropolis, on the 8th of August, 1867, with my note-book in my hand, I seemed to feel the conscious presence of these old patriarchs and matrons, whose earthly footprints I had so long and diligently traced among the dusty records of the past, and I wondered to myself whether their spirits were also conscious of my presence, and of my sacred errand among them.

"Here rest our dead. In thought appears
The shadows dim of by-gone years;
The past—weird, strange—a phantom stands,
Dark, distant, primal, solemn, grand!

Here rest our dead. But every vein
Which throbs to day, gives life again;
Aye, life with all its spirit-thrills,
As when they rambled o'er these hills."

Stone.

JOHN, (439) b. 27 June, 1753, s. of Theophilus,

m. widow Sally L. Stillman, dau. of Samuel and Sarah Lancelot, of Wethersfield, 24 Feb. 1781; grad. Yale College, 1774; settled in Hartford, and died 19 Sept. 1842, age 89. His wife died 21 June, 1840, age 76. He was a merchant of widely extended fame, celebrated for his private enterprise and public spirit, and leaves a name which will be long remembered and associated with the early commercial history and prosperity of the city of Hartford. He was the projector and principal proprietor of the "Great Bridge" across the Connecticut river at Hartford, and opened the street connected therewith, which still bears his name. His zealous labors and liberal support contributed largely in placing the society and parish of Christ church, while then in weak infancy, upon that solid foundation which has led to its present prosperity and eminence.

In 1785 he imported from Canton, China, in the first American vessel that ever entered the Chinese waters, the ship "Empress of China," more fully alluded to under John (561,) a large quantity of China ware, among it a rich and extensive dining set, made to his own order, each piece bearing his own name and coat of arms, (a lion rampant, crest a demi griffin,) which is still preserved and now in possession of the family of Gen. John A. Dix, of New York, present minister to France. His brother, Elias, several years later, also imported another set, with his name and the same device inscribed thereon.

He was vigorous and straight-forward in all his actions, aristocratic in feeling and bearing, and terse, original and direct in conversation, sometimes using expletives that in another man might seem a little profane, but never so in him. He accumulated what in that day was considered a vast estate, but unfortunately in his later days found himself reduced almost to poverty, and lived and died in straitened pecuniary circumstances.

He and my honored father, Capt. William A. (375) were old and early friends, and I well remember a very pleasant interview between them in their old age, under my own roof. Warm in personal friendship, and enlivened a little with a proper admixture of "old memories" and "old Jamaica," and addressing each other ever as "Capt. Bill," and "Uncle John," their colloquy was exceedingly interesting and impressive, and I remember it as if it were but yesterday.

His air and bearing would appear peculiar in this day, but he had several compeers in Hartford then; princely merchants of the old English school; highly educated and of polished culture; bearing themselves with all the proud dignity of lords and nobles "to the manor born." Common men approached them with great deference and with heads uncovered; and we boys were hushed as they passed in the streets, with their gold-headed canes, short breeches, and silver shoe-buckles. Uncle John was one of the "last of the Plantagenets."

He had but one child, a daughter.

"What's hallowed ground? where mourned and missed,
The lips repose our love has kissed!—
But where's their memory's mansion? I'st

A part of ours."

The past and future, in their flight,
Would be as one."

YOUNGS, (511) about 1782, s. of Youngs,

m. Mary Mitchell, of Groton; settled in Groton, and had 1 chi. only, by her. She died, and he mar. 2. Phebe Avery, of Groton, 3 May, 1835; no other child. He afterwards removed to Cranston, R. I.

1313 Fanny, about 1805, m. Amasa Sprague, of R. I. and had 7 children, viz.—1314 Henry Sprague;—1315 Fanny Sprague;—and 1316 Julia Sprague, all died young;—1317 Mary Ann Sprague, about 1825, m. ——— ———, and m. 2d, Francis Latham, of Groton; no child;—1318 Almira Sprague, about 1828, unmarried;—1319, Wm. Sprague, 11 Sept. 1830, m. Kate, dau. of U. S. Chief Justice Salmon P. Chase, about 1864;—and 1320 Amasa Sprague about 1832, m. Mary Warburton, now deceased. The dates in this family, except the birth of Wm. are all conjectural.

The Sprague family of Rhode Island to which Amasa belonged, were the pioneers in the manufacture of cotton goods in this country, and their history is the history of the rise and progress of that immense industrial interest. At first the yarn only was produced by machinery, and was in that form given out to the country damsels of New England, to be by them woven into cloth, in their own hand-looms at home. It was while thus distributing yarn among the damsels of Groton, as clerk for his father, that Amasa found his future wife, Fanny Morgan. He and his brother William became largely engaged in this growing enterprise, erecting cotton-mills, and improving in the introduction and use of new machinery, and acquiring thereby very great private estates and popular influence. William was born in Cranston, R. I. 1800; was a member of the General Assembly of the State when quite young; was Speaker of the House of Representatives of Rhode Island in 1832; a Representative in Congress of U. S. in 1835; Governor of Rhode Island in 1838 and 1839; and in 1842, U. S. Senator, serving two years. He died in Providence, 19 Oct. 1851. Amasa, born in Cranston, was murdered by an Irishman, about 1844, while going from his house to his farm. The supposed homicide was arrested, tried and convicted upon circumstantial evidence, and expiated the crime upon the gallows, protesting his innocence to the last. A few years after, another man, formerly in the employ of Mr. Sprague, and who had returned to Ireland just after the homicide, confessed on his death-bed, as it is said, that he was the sole perpetrator of the crime.

The present William Sprague 2d has ever been the recipient of the same class of popular favors, which were attendant upon his uncle William. Born in Cranston, R. I.; educated at Irving Institute, N. Y.; joined an Artillery Company of Providence, R. I. when eighteen, and became a Colonel; afterwards a Major-General in the civil war; elected Governor of Rhode Island, in 1861; elected U. S. Senator from that State in 1862, for six years, ending 1869, and in 1868, unanimously re-elected for another six years' term; Chairman of Cong. Committee on Manufactures, and member of Committee on Commerce, and also on Military Affairs; President of several Banks in Providence, and Director in various Insurance Companies; and moreover an active partner with his brother Amasa, in the celebrated firm of A. & W. Sprague, of Providence, by far the most extensive and opulent cotton manufacturers in the country.

As an excuse for the entire lack of dates, observable in this family, it is due to myself to say that I have made unusual efforts to obtain them; have written repeatedly, to various members of the family; have applied in person for them, and others have applied in my behalf, but not a line or date has been vouchsafed in response, although often promised; and at a recent interview in Groton, with one of the daughters, Mrs. Mary Ann Latham, several of our family friends being present, we were assured that none of the Sprague family knew their ages or birth-dates; that she did not know her own; that they kept no family record, and cared for none; that a parson Sprague, of Albany, (probably the eminent and venerable Rev. Doct. Sprague,) had been for several years writing them for the same data, for a Sprague genealogy, but had got no reply yet, and she did not believe he ever would. I am therefore quite willing to gratify the self-complacency with which these assurances were made to us, by giving it a little wider family audience.

JOSEPH, (516) b. 28 Nov. 1762, s. of Joseph, mar. Eunice Perkins, dau. of James, of Groton, 3 July, 1783; settled in Groton, where all his nine children, by Eunice, were born. She died 16 March, 1799, age 33, when her last child was but one week old. He next mar. her sister, wid. Mary Latham, (née Perkins,) 14 July, 1799, and removed to Salem, then a part of Colchester, before 1809, and had 3 children by his second wife. She died 4 July, 1833.

When the Methodists first appeared in the south parish of Colchester, now Salem, some 55 years ago, this Joseph Morgan united with them, and became an exhorter and class-leader, holding regular meetings at his house. One bright summer Sabbath morning, when I was five or six years old, on my way to one of his meetings with my sainted mother, I had caught a very gay colored butterfly, and for safe-keeping had confined it in the top of my little straw hat. On entering the room and taking a seat, somewhat shy and embarrassed by the presence of the goodly company, I took off my hat, all forgetful of my little prisoner, who was thus left exposed upon the top of my head. The eye of Elder Morgan, just as he was about to open the services, rested upon it—his long fore-finger, slowly raised, pointed it out to all eyes—and the single word "boy!" which reached my ears, was the last thing I could comprehend, for a space. In my utter confusion, I could have crawled into a very small hole to have hid my shame. So vivid and lasting impressions do mere trifles sometimes make upon the minds of young children. I have probably never seen this man since that day, but his memory has never recurred to me without bringing with it visions of that butterfly.

He was prominent and active in public business; selectman, representative in General Assembly, &c. and died 1 Dec. 1831, age 69, from the effects of a fall from his horse.

mar Caroline Morgan, (711) 3 Jan. 1819, dau. of Theophilus, of Salem; settled in Groton, where he still resides. He is an opulent farmer; a magistrate of wide usefulness and skill in drafting wills, deeds, &c.; town clerk; has been often representative to General Assembly. His wife is also living. All their children were born in Groton, near the old patriarchal homestead of James, the first comer. His kind and courteous aid, and the early town records in his care, have been of essential service to me in tracing the early history of our family.

JOHN, (561) b. 23 Dec. 1750, s. of John 4th, never married. He was carpenter on board the ship "Empress of China, John Green, Esq. commander," and died at sea, 15 April, 1785, aged 35 years, on his passage from Canton to New York, on the first voyage ever made to China by an American vessel. In Vol. I, page 515, of "The Report of the Commercial Relations of the United States with all Foreign Nations," [Cong. Doc. 1856,] the following account occurs of this voyage; which as a matter of peculiar interest in conection with the history of this young mariner, I quote entire.

"Commercial relations between the United States and China date from a period as early as 1784. In the month of February of that year, the "Empress of China," a ship of 360 tons, sailed from New York for Canton, and returned the following year, with a rich and valuable cargo. The success, as well as novelty of the adventure, attracted no little attention throughout the country. The ensuing year another voyage was made in a small vessel of only eighty tons burden, with equal success. Merchants were soon induced to engage in an enterprize which promised the most flattering results; and as early as 1789, five years after the American flag first entered the China seas, fifteen American ships arrived at Canton. Such was the origin of an extensive and profitable trade between the United States and the "Celestial Empire."

The dying sailor and carpenter made his will on board this ship, "dated at sea, April 11th, 1785," in which he gives all his effects on board to his "father, Capt. John Morgan, of Groton," and appoints his "dear friend, Thomas Blake, gunner and steward of the ship," his executor, to deliver his effects over to his father; a charge which appears to have been faithfully executed, as the above will was proved in Stonington Probate, and inventory exhibited 4 April, 1786, and in 1792, Feb. 7, after the death of his father, his effects above, and other estate, were distributed to his brothers, Ebenezer and Stephen, and his sister, Margery, wife of Peleg Williams, as his heirs. As no mention is made, either in this distribution, or in the will of their father, dated 11 Sept. 1789, of any of the other brothers, or their heirs, it is highly probable that they had all died before the latter date.

Among his effects brought from China, were rich and curious Chinese fabrics, China ware, tea-sets, &c. which, from their novelty, as well as their sad associations, must have been for the time, the great theme in the quiet and rural town of Groton, the hive of our family, and as the tradition thereof is still alive, I have deemed this brief narrative worthy of a place in this family record. [See also John, (439) the celebrated merchant of Hartford, in connection with this voyage.]

Elder JAMES, (633) b. 4 Feb. 1780, s. of Isaac,

m. Ruth Webster, of Hartland, Ver. 31 Dec. 1804, who was the mother of all his four children; she died, and he m. next Olive Benton, 1 March, 1852, but had no offspring by her.

He also was born in Groton, Conn. and with his father removed to Hartland, Ver. when about eight years old. He was a clergyman, of the order of Free Will Baptists, and was ordained and settled at Northfield, Ver. 10

June, 1821, where he remained until 1840, when his health failing, he was placed upon the retired list. He then removed to Windsor, Ver. where he died 14 March, 1861, age 81, and where his wife, Ruth, and all his children but Doct. Arnold, are buried. July 31, 1851, while waiting for my breakfast at the Windsor Hotel, Windsor, Ver. to while away a few minutes I walked out to where a venerable appearing old man was hoeing corn, alone by the side of the road, and had a brief conversation with him. So much was I impressed with his quiet urbanity and dignity of manner, and by the cultivated tone of his conversation, that on returning to the hotel I inquired his name, and was told it was Elder James Morgan. I made a note of the fact in my diary, but never recurred to it again until the past year, 1867, sixteen years after, when on noticing it, I sent one of my printed circulars of genealogical inquiry, addressed to "Elder James Morgan, Windsor, Ver. if living, or to any of his descendants," with a request to the Postmaster there to aid in having it reach a proper destination. By his polite and kind attention the circular made an excursion into New Hampshire, (Elder James having been dead as is now seen, over six years,) and thence to Hartland, Ver. where it met the eye of Mrs. Melvina D. (Morgan) Wilder, one of his grand-children, who at once responded, and through whose ready aid I have since been enabled to restore all the members of this lost Vermont branch, from Isaac, (244) of Groton, and to re-group them in their order, in the family tree. A clue even so slight as this, is sometimes of great value to the vigilant genealogist.

CHRISTOPHER, (926) b. 15 Oct. 1777, s. of Christopher, mar. Nancy Barber, 15 July, 1805, dau. of John Barber, of Groton. He was a native of Groton, but removed to Aurora, N. Y. April, 1800, where he settled, and died 4 Oct. 1834, age 57. His wife, born 29 Aug. 1785, died 4 Aug. 1864, age 79. His six sons were all born in Aurora.

As one of the early pioneers from the Groton hive to Western New York, and as the founder of a numerous and eminent line of the name in that State, a brief account of his migration and settlement will be read with interest. In the month of April, 1800, then in his 23d year of life, mounted upon a colt, bought with his own first earnings, as a school teacher, in his native town, with saddle-bags well stored with provisions, by the thoughtful care of his good mother, Deborah, whose rare excellence of character has already been noticed, and with a lean purse to meet traveling expenses, our young adventurer bade adieu to his cherished home and friends, to try his fortunes in the then vague regions of the western wilderness. Arriving in due time at the extreme verge of civilized settlements, on the back of Cayuga Lake, his keen eye scrutinizing at once the loveliness, as well as the natural fertility of this beautiful location, and further induced by the fact that an embryo settlement by Col. John L. Hardingburg, and a few others, was already springing into life, he decided to dismount, hitch his colt, take off his saddle-bags and join fortunes with these new settlers. Afterwards as the settlement increased, he engaged in merchandizing, and at the time of his death, in 1834, had acquired one of the largest estates in western New York. His eldest son, Edwin B. afterwards member of Congress, succeeded him in his business, as a merchant, in 1827.

Assembly, and was, at the time of his death, and had been for many years, the very discreet and efficient agent appointed by the State, to oversee and manage the estate of the Ledyard Pequots, a remnant of that ancient tribe of Indians, for whom the State had made a reservation of about 1,000 acres of land.

m. 4 May, 1830, Harriet Emeline Saxton, dau. of Nathaniel and Fanny (Chamberlin) Saxton, of Lebanon, born 19 Nov. 1807; settled in Hartford, Conn. where they still reside.

And now, to any curious kinsman who may demand that the family Registrar should show also his own personal record, I reply. I was born in Salem, Conn. then a parish of Colchester; removed when eight years old, with my parents, to Lebanon; labored there on a hard farm several years, attending a small district school a few months each winter; in later youth a sailor, and at the age of twenty-one and several years after, a commander, in the West India trade; since then for a brief period, engaged in merchandizing, but generally in the public service, Alderman, City Sheriff, Judge of City Court, First Selectman, School Superintendent; twelve years Prison Warden; first Pres. Phœnix Insurance Co. &c.; and at present, State Commissioner on tax laws and taxation; President Board of Trustees of the "Hartford Home," &c. &c. and in broken health and great physical debility and suffering, which has reduced my ordinary weight of 165, to a skeleton of 110 pounds, devoting my chief attention to the preparation of this family record, in honor of the Morgan sept and clan.

It is seen that my early educational advantages were very limited, but I do not offer that fact as an excuse for the defects of this work, literary or otherwise, for in this age of universal light and knowledge, all may acquire educational accomplishments, who have eyes to see, or ears to hear.

Harriet Emeline, (1988) grad. of Hartford High School, class of 1862, died instantly and without any premonition, on the morning of April 28, 1863, at Hartford, aged nineteen years, six months and fifteen days. Four months prior she had a fearful fall, which for a few moments stunned her into unconsciousness, but from which she soon recovered, and no further effects of it were afterwards manifested, until the fatal morning when, in a second of time, she passed from life, to life eternal, in the presence of her astonished, bewildered and heart-riven parents, without a word or sign. One of the loveliest of earth's daughters, her whole life and character in the world below, seemed better adapted to the world above, and surely a father's heart and hand may be indulged in recording here this brief memorial, and saying of her early exit—

Suddenly, but safely.

m. Matilda A. Fisher, 29 Jan. 1839, dau. of Samuel, of Lynchburg, Va.; grad. Yale (Medical) College, 1837; settled as a physician in Evansville, Ind. 1837, and still residing there.

I have never seen the Doctor, but my heart has warmed to him from the generous and manly tone of his correspondence. Reared as a farmer's boy, in Canterbury, Conn.; attended Brooklyn Academy, and afterwards Phillips Academy, and Plainfield Academy; commenced the study of his profession with Andrew Harris, M. D. a noted physician and surgeon; completed it as a member of the medical class in Yale College; graduated in 1837, and settled immediately after in Evansville, where his career in his profession has been eminently successful.

Dignified but urbane in deportment, genial and sympathetic in social and professional character, he has a vast power of personal magnetism about him which commands the warm regard and friendship of all who know him. Both as a skillful professional man, and as a highly cultivated Christian gentleman, he ranks among the foremost in his city; and his pecuniary success enables him to maintain himself and family in that position with becoming grace. He stands six feet three inches in height, and weighs 230 pounds; a fine specimen of a manly frame, enclosing a manly heart.

CHARLES, (1193) b. 21 April, 1795, s. of George, m. 1st, Emily Reeves, 20 Dec. 1817. She died 9 April, 1850, and he m. 2d, Mary J. Sexton, 24 June, 1852; settled and now residing in New York city, No. 7 North Madison Square; a wealthy shipping merchant.

The history of Charles Morgan is interesting and instructive, as illustrating what may be accomplished by an American boy, with no other aid and inheritance than his own persevering energy and enterprise. Born in Clinton, Conn.; early thrown upon his own resources, he entered at the age of fourteen years, as clerk in a grocery store, in New York city. About maturity he commenced business for himself in a small way, but soon enlarged it by importing fruit from the West Indies; became part owner of a brig, and a few years later, sole owner of a line of sailing vessels in the West India trade from New York. He was subsequently the founder and principal proprietor of the celebrated "Morgan Iron Works," a mammoth foundry for the casting and manufacture of heavy steam-ship and steam machinery, on the East River, New York, which still bears his name. But his greatest success and celebrity has been won as a shipping merchant, and steam-ship owner; the extent of his business in this line being unrivaled by that of any other individual in the United States. He started the first steam-ship between New York and Charleston, S. C., which with his usual successful management, soon grew into a regular line of steamers, yours truly Chas. H. Morgan owned by him. In 1836, he sent the first steamer from New Orleans to the coast of Texas. This was before that young empire had conquered her independence from Mexico, but his far reaching sagacity and foresight at once discerning the future importance of the commerce of that State and the Gulf Coast, he very soon became the pioneer, as usual, in establishing several lines of steam-ships from New Orleans to various Texan and other ports along the Gulf. He has continued ever since in the prosecution of this enterprize, until now the "Morgan Lines of Steamers," in the Gulf of Mexico, are as widely known in commerce, as is the Gulf of Mexico itself. He is at present, the sole owner of no less than seventeen heavy first class steam-ships, constructed of iron, all in active service, plying the waters of the Gulf, in various lines from New Orleans; and this vast enterprize, as well as all his other business is still under his own personal direction and management, in the cheerful, hale and hearty 74th year of his age. His estate is a princely one, and he ranks among the eminent millionaires of N. Y. city.

His tastes are for private life, seeking no public notice, honors or office. Of gentle speech and courteous bearing, he makes many friends and few enemies, and among his many other excellent personal qualities he has that, which ever marks the true gentleman, and is often one of the secrets of success, of treating his numerous subordinates with uniform affability and kindness.

CALVIN, (1240) b. 11 April, 1801, s. of Nicholas, m. 29 June, 1830, Julia M. Disbrow, dau. of John, of Fairfield, and resides in Groton, a sober minded, honest, substantial farmer, but of a deep religious tone and temperament. Some twenty-five years ago, under a strong conviction of duty to follow the Saviour's memorable example of fasting, he abstained forty days and nights, utterly as was said, from any food or nourishment whatever, taking nothing but a little water, with an occasional pinch of salt in it. During this time, though his flesh became much wasted, his general health seemed to be not much impaired. He said the angels fed him while he slept. The public press of the day was full of comments and speculations upon the wonderful phenomena of his case, but without eliciting any satisfactory explanation. I have ventured to suggest as possible, that the angels who fed him while he slept, may have been, all unconsciously to himself, kindly assisted by some earthly friend, anxious for his fate, but this suggestion finds no support among his intelligent neighbors. He has had several occasions of extreme fasting since, but never for so long a period.

Capt. ALFRED G. (1543) b. 19 Nov. 1816, s. of Jedediah, m. Rachel, dau. of Solomon Grant, of Maysville, Ky. and cousin of Gen. U. S. Grant, 26 Aug. 1852. She died in New Orleans, 29 Aug. 1853, and he died at Sacramento, Cal. 26 April, 1860, age 43; no children.

Educated at Cayuga Academy; studied law; removed in 1836, to Louisville, Ky. and engaged in commercial pursuits; embarked early in 1850, for the then new golden El Dorado of California, in quest of miners fortune; purchased for $10,000 one-seventh of a quartz mine in Calaveros, afterwards so celebrated as the "Morgan mine," and became President of the Company working it. In the report of J. Ross Browne, on the mineral resources west of the Rocky Mountains, made to the Secretary of the Treasury, 1868, page 59, this mine is described as one of the richest in that land of gold marvels. From Feb. 1850 to Dec. 1851, the company extracted 2,800,000 dollars worth of gold, besides very large quantities which were stolen. On one occasion 110,000 dollars worth of gold was thrown out at a single blast. The excitement in the region ran so high, and the curiosity to see the mine was so intense, that Robinson's ferry, two miles below, took $10,000 for ferriage in six weeks. But this unparalleled success proved fatal to the Company. In that wild region it was too great to be witnessed in peace. Several hundred lawless villains banded together under the lead of "Billy Mulligan," and other kindred ruffians, drove off the owners by force, and took entire possession themselves. Nor did the civil tribunals to which appeal was made, succeed in restoring to the owners, quiet possession, until after the death of Capt. Morgan, the president.

To show the esteem in which he was held, I extract from an obituary notice of him in the N. O. Picayune.

"At the time of his death, he held the important and responsible state office of Commissioner of Immigration. No one possessed the esteem and friendship of a larger portion of his fellow-citizens; and the above announcement bears to many, on this side, a burden of sorrow no less poignant than it has caused in his adopted state, [Cal.] His integrity, his frankness, and his high sense of honor, won for him the esteem of all acquaintances. His genial, kind and benevolent disposition, secured for him the devoted attachment of all who enjoyed his friendship. Seldom was there met with, such an abnegation of self as characterized him, whether in responding to the calls of charity from strangers, or in the more grateful office of aiding friends. None die out of the family circle more beloved than was he. The community in which he died, [Sacramento,] have testified in a manner honorable to his memory, their appreciation of his worth, and their bereavement in his loss."

Yours truly

E. A. Morgan

KELLOGG & BULKELEY HARTFORD CONN.

Hon. LEWIS H. (1544) b. 21 Nov. 1818, s. of Jedediah,

m. Mary Elizabeth, dau. of Lemuel Steele, of Albany, N. Y. 13 Aug. 1851; she was born 20 Dec. 1819. He graduated at Union College, Schenectady, in 1840; studied law, and settled as a lawyer in Rochester, in 1842, rising rapidly to a distinction which secured a lucrative practice, and in 1864 retired from the profession in affluence, to devote himself more exclusively to scientific pursuits. In 1861, he was a member of the N. Y. State Assembly, and in 1867 was elected a State Senator, for two years from the 28th district, which office he now holds. In "Life Sketches of the State officers, Senators," &c. of N. Y. 1868, there is a well-merited biographical notice of him, from which I quote.

"With a well cultivated mind and a natural tendency to investigating and philosophical modes of thought, Mr. Morgan's attention was early called to the study of our native Indian tribes, and especially of the powerful Six Nations, whose seat of empire was in Western and Central New York. He studied them carefully in their historical relations, and especially with reference to the structure and principles of their civil and domestic institutions. In the course of these studies he examined and surveyed many of the ancient traces of Indian occupation in the western part of the State; and in 1848 he communicated to the Regents of the University a paper urging the formation of a museum of Indian antiquities, to illustrate the aboriginal era of our history, and to show the progress and condition of the useful arts among the tribes. The earlier reports of the Regents upon the condition of the State Cabinet, contain several elaborate and fully illustrated papers from his pen, upon the ancient earthworks and modern arts of our Indians, and a large part of the collection of aboriginal utensils and relics in the State Museum, was made by him.

"In 1851, he published a volume entitled "The League of the Iroquois," in which he gave the matured result of long and careful researches into the true nature of the institutions, civil, social and religious, of that famous confederacy of tribes, whose history is so closely identified with our colonial annals. Of this valuable work, the North American Review, the highest of our critical journals, said in July, 1865, in an article on the Indian tribes: 'Among modern students of Iroquois institutions, a place far in advance of all others is due to Lewis H. Morgan, himself an Iroquois by adoption, and intimate with the race from boyhood. His work, The League of the Iroquois, is a production of most thorough and able research. Though often differing widely from Mr. Morgan's conclusions, we cannot bear a too emphatic testimony to the value of his researches.' In the recently published life of Dr. Francis Wayland, long President of Brown University, we find a letter from that eminent scholar addressed to Mr. Morgan, in which he says: 'I have just completed reading, for the second time, your League of the Iroquois. I cannot forbear the pleasure of thanking you for it. It is the most remarkable book of the kind I have ever seen. * * * It is in all respects to me a most surprising book, and ought to be in every public library in the world. Men ought to know that such a race as this has lived.' Francis Parkman, the brilliant historian of 'The Conspiracy of Pontiac,' 'The Jesuits in North America,' and other works of the highest character in our early history, bears equally emphatic testimony to the value of Mr. Morgan's book, to which he constantly refers as an authority of the greatest weight in all that relates to the Iroquois.

"In the course of his studies of the Indians, Mr. Morgan's attention was strongly drawn to their peculiar system of family relationship, and to the terms which they employ in addressing their relatives and kindred. In pursuing his investigations, he made long journeys to the West and visited the tribes of the Great Plains and of the Upper Missouri. He found every where among the aborigines a strongly defined and peculiar system of relationship, of which, in the course of his studies, he detected unmistakable traces among the barbarian nations of the Old World. This led him to enter upon a series of investigations, extended to nearly every nation of the globe by means of letters and carefully prepared circulars addressed to our missionaries and consuls in foreign countries. The results of this vast and laborious correspondence, which was carried on for many years, have been embodied by him in an extensive and elaborate work entitled 'Systems of Consanguinity and Affinity of the Human Family,' which the Smithsonian Institution has accepted, and has now in course of publication. A committee of eminent ethnologists, to whom it was submitted for examination by the Secretary of the Institution, pronounced it a work of great value, contributing original and important additions to the science of ethnology.

"While sojourning in the Lake Superior region, where he usually spends the summer months, Mr. Morgan made a special study of the habits of the beaver, the result of which he has given to the public in a beautifully illustrated volume, entitled 'The American Beaver and his Works,' of which Lippincott & Co., of Philadelphia, are the publishers. The book adds largely to our knowledge of the natural history of this most intelligent and interesting animal, about which so many fables have been related, and of which so little has been hitherto accurately known.

"As a lawyer, Mr. Morgan, for nearly twenty years, stood high in his profession at Rochester, and having acquired an ample competence by its successful practice, retired from the bar to devote himself to scientific and literary pursuits. Socially and personally he is one of the foremost of the citizens of Rochester, where he is held in universal esteem for his fine talents, his scholarly acquirements and his spotless purity of character."

A paper entitled "A CONJECTURAL SOLUTION OF THE ORIGIN OF THE CLASSIFICATORY SYSTEM OF RELATIONSHIP," was presented and read by Mr. Morgan, at the monthly meeting of the "American Academy of Arts and Sciences," Feb. 1868, which has just been issued from the press by that association. This paper is a synoptical, or rather an epitomised exposition of the general facts and inductions of his forthcoming work on the "Systems of Consanguinity and Affinity of the Human Family," and gives, both in theme and treatment, a rich foretaste of the highly interesting and valuable character of that work.

His published works all show habits of close observation and study, and in style he possesses a felicity in technical diction, and in the use of scientific nomenclature, strikingly characteristic and clear. He is decidedly the savant of our family in science and natural history, and stands among us like Saul among the prophets, a head and shoulders above all others of the tribe.

I have to confess that my own notes led me, at first, to challenge his claim to a niche in our fraternity, but he charged resolutely and gallantly through all my defences, turned my own ample store of gathered facts and circumstances fairly against myself, and succeeded, not only with convincing, but demonstrative evidence in establishing his clear right by lineal descent, to his present place in our family camp.

m. Eliza Matilda Waterman, (976) 19 Aug. 1833, dau. of Capt. Henry Waterman and Lydia (née Morgan) Waterman, of Hartford, Conn.; now residing at 411 Fifth Avenue, N. Y city.

Gov. Morgan is a native of Massachusetts, though of the recent Groton, Conn. stock. All his ancestors were born and buried in Groton, the old hive of our family. His father was also born there, and settled there after his marriage, but in 1809, removed to Washington, Berkshire Co. Mass. where he resided a few years, and where this son, Edwin D. was born. He subsequently returned to Connecticut, and settled in Windsor, where his sons were reared as farmer's boys, attending the local free Academy at that place, in winter; Edwin D. also attending one term at Bacon Academy, at Colchester, in the winter of 1826; and this comprised all his school advantages. In 1828, at the age of 17, he entered as clerk in the wholesale grocery store of his uncle, Nathan, (962) at Hartford; became partner in the business in 1831, at the age of 20; and soon after majority he was chosen a common councilman in the city government. In 1836, he removed to New York city, where he has ever since resided; extensively and with eminent success devoted to commercial pursuits, accumulating a princely fortune. In 1849, he was elected Alderman of the city, and the same year was elected State Senator for two years, and re-elected in 1851, serving two terms. In 1855, he was appointed a Commissioner of Emigration, and held that office until 1858; was a Vice-President of the National Republican Convention, at Pittsburg, which nominated John C. Fremont, for President of the U. S. and was then chosen chairman of the National Republican Committee, and continued in that office eight years, and until 1864, when he became, and still continues to be, the Chairman of the Union Congressional Committee. In 1858, he was elected Governor of the State of New York, for two years; his administration a popular and successful one, and in 1860, he was re-elected for another term; the only re-election to that office which had occurred in twenty years. In 1861, Sept. 30, he was appointed by President Lincoln, a Major General of Volunteers, and the state of New York was created a military department, under his command; for which services as Major General he declined to receive pay. In 1863, he was elected a Senator from that state, in the Congress of the U. S. for six years, which office he now holds, with a fair prospect of re-election in 1869; serving on the Committee on Finance, on Commerce, on the Pacific Railroad, and the Congressional Library.

"The applause of listening senates to command" is not his role. He is not an orator; attempts no senatorial harangue, and participates in no forensic debate; confining himself in his public remarks, strictly to such brief explanations as are necessary on presenting petitions, reports, or other similar business papers; but his sound judgment, shrewd sagacity, and eminent practical business capacity, contribute a great weight of influence, and render him a useful and valuable member of the Senate.

As a Senator he became ex officio, a member of the recent Grand National Inquest for the trial of Andrew Johnson, President of the United States, on the grave question of his Impeachment; an event which the pen of history will record in future retrospect, as by far the most conspicuous and memorable of his public life, or that of his compeers on that tribunal.

ONE CHILD.

3038 Alfred Waterman Morgan, born 19 Oct. 1854.

In the order of the several generations, and also in the order of successive primogeniture in each generation, as strictly followed in this genealogy, this young scion of the Gens terminates the long catalogue, and closes the Grand Family Review.

Commencing with James, in his humble abode, reared of rude logs, in the primeval wilderness of Pequot, I close with this child of fortune, nurtured in the full sunshine of every comfort and luxury which wealth can command, in this voluptuous age; himself sole heir presumptive of an inheritance exceeding in value by more than five fold, the entire grand list of property of the whole Commonwealth of Connecticut in the days of James, his ancestor. How striking the contrast! It indeed well represents and measures the gigantic strides which our goodly land has made in material progress, wealth and numbers, since first our pilgrim fathers planted it. A few feeble colonists, scattered along the wild shore of a strange wilderness, have sprung, as if by magic, into a Nation, whose proud flag, the symbol of triumphant Liberty, floats over every sea, and whose angry drum-roll would awaken consternation in every Imperial Court in Christendom. It would be a source of immeasurably deeper gratification, could we but feel the conscious assurance that the advancement of our Heaven-favored realm, in the higher and nobler elements of morality and virtue, had kept equal pace with this upward and onward march in material prosperity.

God save the good old Clan! God save the good old Union!!

"And here will I make an end. And if I have done well, and as is fitting the story, it is that which I desired; but if slenderly and meanly, it is that which I could attain unto."
II Maccabees, XV. 37, 38.

APPENDIX.

THE manuscript of which the following is a copy, came into my hands several years ago. Its early traditions of our family were the first and only ones I had ever discovered, and as they so generally corresponded with the results of my own investigations, previously made, were exceedingly interesting and gratifying, as affording additional verification of those results. Its style is so piquant, racy and refreshing; its tone so frank, manly and independent, and its facts and legends so interesting, in connection with our own family history, that I am constrained to place it also in print; not only as a valuable and spicy addenda, but to secure its better and safer preservation.

It is to be hoped that some one of the numerous and highly respectable descendants of MILES MORGAN, of Springfield, will ere long prepare a full genealogy of that family, as a twin volume to this of his brother JAMES; the early history and materials already gathered affording unusual facilities for its easy and early completion. N. H. M.

"A HISTORY OF

THE FAMILY OF MILES MORGAN,

WHO EMIGRATED FROM ENGLAND, AND SETTLED AT SPRINGFIELD, MASS. A. D. 1636, COMPILED BY TITUS MORGAN, JUN. ONE OF HIS DESCENDANTS.

MIDDLETOWN, OCT. 1809."

INTRODUCTORY REMARKS.

THE family of Morgan of which a brief account is given in the following pages, is of Welsh extraction. The ancient race from which they are descended have inhabited the mountains of Wales from time immemorial, and the name is still numerous in that country, as well as in other parts of Great Britain. But though our honest namesakes on the Cambrian Hills are no doubt able to trace their lineage up to a period some few years before the deluge, (the Welsh being famous for their genealogical skill,) yet the Morgans of Massachusetts having lost all "legendary lore" of this kind, have preserved no account of their family, not even traditional, beyond their old ancestor, Miles Morgan, who was among the first planters of Springfield. It may therefore with the greatest propriety be said or sung,

> "What if our ancient but ignoble blood,
> Has crept through 'Welshmen' ever since the flood."

We thus reply, Our family is young; for at this day it would be utterly impossible to trace the genealogy of the family further back than to the old puritanic planter before mentioned, and whom we must therefore consider as its founder. Indeed his descendants can have no motives to carry their inquiries any higher—family pride surely cannot furnish a motive—as there were none of the name in Great Britain who, (to use a vulgar phrase) were able to make a noise in the world, prior to the migration of our old patriarch to New England; though after that era three persons appeared who were of sufficient notoriety to preserve their names from oblivion, which accordingly have been handed down to us.

During the usurpations of Oliver Cromwell, one of the name, for his intrepidity in "fighting the battles of the Lord," (to adopt the ridiculous language of that day,) as also, no doubt, for his dexterity in ranting and exhorting, (a high recommendation in those days of religious hypocrisy,) was made a General by the usurper, and entrusted with the command of the forces which were sent to assist the French against the Spaniards, in the Low Countries, where they joined the army commanded by the celebrated Marshal Turene, who soon after gained a great victory over the Spaniards at Dunes, chiefly by the means of these auxiliaries, who it seems as well knew how to play the warrior as the hypocrite, and who, it must be confessed, had the best masters to teach them the art of excelling in both characters.

Another, a few years after made some noise as a Deistical writer, but was only a literary thief, having stolen the worst garbage of his infidel predecessors, which he jumbled into a system and published as his own.

A third, about the beginning of the last century, was a physician of some learning and some note in the city of London. He was, however, severely lashed, under the title of the "Standard Bearer," as an egregious and disgusting pedant, by old Doctor Turner, in his "Letters to a Young Physician," where he is represented as follows: "In manners affected and solemn—in language inflated and bombastic—in observation and remark trite and shallow."

But the principal theme of the old Doctor's irony, was the medical theory which he had embraced, and for which he was a zealous partizan. He belonged to the "Mechanical Sect" of physicians, whose theory, notwithstanding its absurdity, was at that time in some vogue. They supposed that diseases of all kinds were caused by obstructions, and that the chemical medicines which were then becoming fashionable, were the proper instruments for removing those obstructions. For, the minute particles of these medicines being, to their apprehension, in the form and shape of various implements which are used in the handicrafts, such as the wedge, the mallet, and the drill, &c. &c. these being taken into the alimentary canal and thence conveyed by absorption into the obstructed vessels, there raise a horrible clatter, by hammering, drilling, and driving away, at a strange rate, and thus merely by their mechanical action removing the obstructions and the disease together. [Do not laugh reader! greater men than the "Standard Bearer" adopted the same fantastic whims and became the blind votaries of the same extravagant and ridiculous theory.]

Thus, the two first of these personages rendered themselves infamously famous; the last became mechanically ridiculous. But we claim no relationship with them.

In America, but one person only of our name has been sufficiently notorious to have his deeds inscribed on the page of history. I allude to General Daniel Morgan, of Virginia. But whether the bravery with which he fought the battles of the Revolution against his lawful sovereign, has crowned his name with laurels which will not hereafter wither, must depend upon the suffrage of some future generation, which shall judge more impartially and dispassionately than the present, respecting the motives and the conduct of those men, who began the work of revolution in America, which like a devouring flame, has spread over a great part of the habitable globe, with war and murder, ruin and devastation, plunder, oppression and tyranny following in its train—tyranny of the worst species—tyranny disguised in the stolen mantle of freedom. The result of all which has been the establishment of the most gigantic despotism that ever cursed the earth. Amidst the revolutionary convulsions of Europe, "a beast has arisen out of the sea,"* more cruel and rapacious than "the fiercest brute that roams the deserts of Numidia," before whom nations tremble and princes bow. An unprincipled and aspiring wretch—a monster familiarized to the commission of the foulest crimes, by artfully improving the events of this tremendous era—has been enabled to rise from the dunghill upon which he was born, to sovereign sway;—to claim and to receive imperial honors—to seize and to retain a more enormous degree of power than was ever before held by mortal hands, and which threatens the freedom of the whole human race.

As the revolution in America was but the first scene in the dreadful drama which is now acting on the stage of the world, (when it will be concluded God only knows,) surely the time must arrive when the blessings! resulting from that event will be more justly estimated than they have ever yet been. But this is neither the time or the place for political disquisition.

The best character that I find any where in books, to which the name of Morgan stands affixed, is recorded by Doctor Smollet, and this alas! is a fictitious character. I mean the honest Welsh surgeon who makes so interesting a figure in the adventures of "Roderick Random," and who is again brought upon the stage in the "Adventures of Peregrine Pickle." Live forever! with all thy oddities and humor! honest son of the creative fancy of Smollet! I respect and honor thee more than all the revolutionary Generals, Mechanical Doctors and Deistical scribblers that ever existed.

Having thus shown that our family must shine without borrowed lustre or not shine at all, it only remains that we acknowledge its humble character.

The Morgans of Massachusetts have generally been husbandmen. Agriculture has, with very few exceptions, been their occupation. If, therefore, the "Philosopher of Monticello" was correct in asserting that "the farmers are God's chosen people, if He ever had a chosen people in the world," then certainly our family may boast of this peculiar honor To this Jeffersonian "Title of Distinction," however, the scribbler of these pages is compelled to forego his claim. His wayward fate led him into the mazes of Æsculapian lore, and he is doomed to earn a scanty subsistence by acting the part of a Physician in the tragi-comedy of Life. But at present being himself deprived of health, and by this means confined for the most part to his own habitation, he endeavors to beguile the "wearisome days" which are "appointed to him," as well as he is able.

One resource is his pen, with which he has attempted to amuse himself in making this compilation of Names and Dates and Characters, &c. &c. But being willing also to amuse others, he now Dedicates this production of his hours of gloomy leisure to his "kindred according to the flesh,"—the Morgans of Massachusetts, who alone have any concern with it. Should they be disposed to censure the performance, or to cavil at certain opinions which have been indulged by the writer—some of which, it is confessed, are very different from the popular notions of the day—his answer is ready. In regard to what he has written he studied no persons humor but his own, his principal object while thus employing his time and his pen, was his own amusement and gratification.

APPENDIX TO THE FOREGOING.

Since writing the foregoing, another person of our name has recurred to my recollection, whose character may be worth recording here. But I shall place it by itself, not choosing that it should appear among the characters already mentioned, as I think it merits better company.

The person to whom I have reference is the late Doctor John Morgan, a native of Pennsylvania, born about the year 1730. He was educated in classic lore at the college of Philadelphia, and was "among the first of her sons who shared its public honors,"—the institution having then been but recently established. On leaving college he entered upon the study of medicine under Dr. John Redman, of Philadelphia, with whom he served an apprenticeship of six years; at the conclusion of which term he "devoted himself to a military life, principally with a view of becoming more skillful in his profession, and was for four years engaged in very extensive practice in the army, among diseases of every kind." This was during the war between Great Britain and France, which began in 1755, and was at this time raging in America.

About the year 1760 he went to Europe, where he spent five years under the most celebrated masters, in every branch of medicine, sparing no labor or expense to store his mind with an extensive acquaintance in every science that related any way to the duty of a physician, expending in this pursuit a sum of money of which the very interest would prove no contemptible income.

While in Europe, Dr. Morgan attended the practice of the public hospitals of the city of London. At Edinburgh, he became member of the celebrated medical school of that city; attended the lectures of the different professors, and was honored with the degree of Doctor of Physic. At Paris, also, and afterwards at Padua, he continued to pursue his favorite studies, under the professors of those famous seats of medical learning. His ardent thirst for literary improvement carried him at length to Rome, where, besides attending to the main object of his travels, he had an opportunity to survey the splendid ruins of that ancient metropolis of the world.

During his residence in Italy he gained the friendly notice of the great Morgagni,* by whom he was treated with much kindness and regard. It is related that Morgagni, in conversation with our medical traveler, told him that their names were originally the same, the Italian idiom making the only difference betwixt Morgan and Morgagni. When Morgan left Italy, the venerable professor, as a memorial of his friendship and esteem, presented him with his learned and valuable works. Having thus spent fifteen years in the acquisition of knowledge and professional skill, Doctor Morgan returned to his native country, in 1765, and entered with considerable eclat upon medical practice in the city of Philadelphia.

* "John Baptist Morgagni, M. D. First Professor of Anatomy in the University of Padua, and member of the most eminent societies of Europe, was born at Ferli, in Italy, 1682. At the age of twenty he taught Anatomy with the highest reputation. When nearly eighty he published his large and valuable work, 'De causis et sedibus morborum.' This last and most important of all his productions, will afford convincing evidence of his industry and abilities, to the latest posterity. His other works are in a great measure strictly anatomical. On the 5th of December, 1771, when nearly ninety years of age, Death ended his glorious career in the learned world."

Soon after his return, a proof that high expectations from his known talents and industry, were entertained by the public, he was appointed a professor of the theory and practice of physic, in the College of Philadelphia—the first medical professor, in the first medical school, ever instituted in America.

The plan of establishing a regular course of instruction in the various branches of the healing art, being thought by many, a project of uncertain issue, considering the infant state of the country, the professor elect in his inaugural discourse, "delivered at a public commencement held in the College of Philadelphia, May, 1765," with all the strength of argument, urged the necessity and utility of the undertaking; and with eloquence and pathos called upon the public to patronize and encourage the infant institution. This discourse was soon after published. It displays uncommon genius, learning and observation.

As a proof of the high estimation in which his character was held, abroad as well as at home, it will be sufficient to notice that at this time, (viz. in 1765, when he was about thirty-five years of age,) he had received the following honorable tokens of literary distinction: "M. D., F. R. S. London; Corresponding Member of the Royal Academy of Surgeons, at Paris; Member of the Arcadian Belles Lettres Society, at Rome; Licentiate of the Royal College of Physicians, in London, and in Edinburgh; and Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine, in the College of Philadelphia."

Doctor Morgan, the winter succeeding his appointment, entered upon the duties of his professorship, and continued to deliver an annual course of medical lectures, until the commencement of the revolutionary contest, when he was appointed by Congress, Physician General to the American Army. But jealousies and suspicions being excited against him, he was dismissed from his station, after having performed the duties of it but a short time. Being in possession of a competent fortune, disgusted with the ill treatment which he had received, he now relinquished all medical employment, and lived in retirement ever after. The time of his death I can not learn; it however happened some years ago.

A FAMILY RECORD, &c.

3039 Miles Morgan, from whom the family of that name in Massachusetts is descended, was a native of Great Britain,* but in regard to the particular town in which he first saw the light, or what was the condition, or occupation of the family to which he belonged, no account has been transmitted to us, either by himself or his immediate descendants.

He however resided several years in the city of Bristol, from whence he with two brothers who were older than himself, sailed for New England, and arrived at Boston in April, 1636.

One of these brothers,† (name lost,) settled at Plymouth.‡ His family afterwards removed to Connecticut, and settled in the Eastern part of that Colony. His descendants are very numerous.

The other of these brothers, John Morgan, went to Virginia, and settled in that Province. It is said, that observing the bigotry and the persecuting spirit of those Godly Puritans, who though their professed motive for removing to these Western regions was the enjoyment of religious liberty, yet would tolerate none whose sentiments were not in perfect unison with their own, he quitted these meek disciples of John Calvin with disgust and indignation, resolving to try his fortune in another clime.

Soon after the arrival of these brothers at Boston, a number of families emigrated from Roxbury, and planted the town of Springfield.§

Miles Morgan joined himself to these emigrants, and accompanied them in their enterprise. On their arrival at their place of destination, the land upon what is now the Main Street in Springfield, was divided into shares and distributed by lot among the settlers. The tract of land which was allotted to Morgan, extended on the south side of Ferry Lane from the

* Error:—he was born in Wales, at or near Llandaff, Glamorgan Co.

† James, of New London, whose history and descendants are given in this volume.

‡ Quere? He settled at Roxbury; see history of James the first, of New London.

§ William Pyncheon, Esq. was at the head of this party. The purchase which they made of the Indians, included Springfield, in its ancient extent, i. e. the tract of land that comprises the present towns of Springfield, West Springfield, Wilbraham, Ludlow, and Longmeadow, Mass.; comprehending also the towns of Suffield and Enfield, in Conn. Mr. Pyncheon had been a man of property and distinction in England, and was one of the patentees of the Colony of Massachusetts. His descendants still possess the old family seat in Springfield. It is an ancient brick pile of singular construction, and doubtless was once thought elegant.

Main Street to the River. It is a rich and beautiful tract. There are a number of houses now built upon it, it being divided into several smaller lots.*

Having taken possession of his land and made some progress in improving it, our honest progenitor began to ponder upon the shrewd observation of the wise King of Israel, "two are better than one," and at length concluded himself in urgent want of a wife, and determined to procure this "good thing" without delay. The following account of his courtship and marriage is preserved. It would agree very well with the times of patriarchal simplicity, and for the promptitude and dispatch with which the business was conducted might compare with the account which the Hebrew historian has given us, of the manner in which Isaac of old obtained his Rebecca. There is this difference, however; the Jewish patriarch transacted his business by proxy; ours "managed his own affairs in his own way." But to the story.

On his passage from England he formed an acquaintance with a young woman who belonged to a family which on their arrival settled at Beverly. To her he determined to prefer his suit. This he did by letter, in which he proposed to her to become his wife, and the sharer of his dubious fortunes in the wilderness. To this frank proposal, she with equal frankness (for coquetry it seems was not then in fashion.) wrote him an explicit answer, and avowed her willingness to comply with his wishes. Her suitor, it appears, was resolved to prosecute the affair like a man of business. On receiving an answer so favorable to his inclinations, he immediately engaged two of his friends and an Indian, to attend him in his matrimonial expedition, and departed "with all convenient speed," taking with them an old horse for the purpose of conveying the household stuff of the intended bride, to her future habitation; and their muskets, with which they might "put to flight the armies of the aliens," who might perchance molest them in their pilgrimage to and from "the land of the people in the East."

Prosperity attended the journey of our patriarchal ancestor, and the hymeneal torch was kindled on his arrival.

The matrimonial contract having been "satisfied in due form," the old pack horse received his destined burden; the bridegroom and his companions shouldered their muskets, and thus escorted the bride to Springfield, who walked with them on foot, the whole distance from Beverly to that place, viz. about an hundred and twenty miles. Surely these were Amazonian times, when women had strength, and were not too squeamish

* The spot upon which our old patriarch lived and died, and which was possessed by his children after him, is now [1809] occupied by Dr. Chauncey Brewer. It is very pleasantly situated on the South side of Ferry Lane, about twenty rods from the River.

[See page 18 for further account of these premises. N. H. M.]

to exert it. Female, and effeminate, I suppose, were not then words of synonymous meaning. By this marriage Morgan had a numerous family of children.

In 1675, Springfield was attacked by the Indians, who burnt a considerable part of the town. A few fortified houses only, in which the people were mostly collected, escaped the conflagration. In Morgan's house a number of people had taken refuge. A party of Indians attacked the house, but their fire was returned with such spirit and success by those within, several of whom were keen marksmen,* that the assailants found it dangerous to appear in sight of the windows and loop-holes, and after some hours were glad to sheer off. Thirty houses, besides barns and outhouses, were destroyed in the town at this time. Two of the inhabitants, Mr. Pyncheon and Mr. Purchase, sustained a loss of £1,000 each. This was the first damage which the town had suffered since its settlement.

What year Morgan married his wife, as before related, or what was his age at that time, can not now be ascertained. There is a tradition that when he accompanied the Roxbury emigrants to Springfield, he was short of twenty-one years of age, (though probably not many months,) and that he deceived them, in respect to his age, in order to draw his share of the lands; none being entitled to share in the distribution who were under the age of twenty-one years. According to the records of the town of Springfield, his eldest child was born in 1644. It is therefore most probable that he lived a bachelor until 1643; when, allowing him to have been of the age of twenty-one in 1636, he was twenty-eight years old. This I think we may conclude, the era of his marriage with the Beverly damsel. Her name† I have not been able to discover, the marriage not being inserted in the records, perhaps on account of its taking place in another town. All the information which those records afford us respecting the family of Miles Morgan and his wife, is contained in the following extracts:

3039 Mary, dau. of Miles Morgan, born 12th month, 14th day, 1644.‡
3040 Jonathan, son of said Miles, was born 9th month, 16th day, 1646.
3041 David, born 7th month, 23d day, 1648, m. Mary Clark.
3042 Pelatiah, born 5th month, 17th day, 1650, killed by Indians.
3043 Isaac, born 3d month, 12th day, 1652.

* Some of Morgan's sons are said to have been perfect Nimrods at the laudable business of Indian hunting. One of them, Pelatiah, was afterwards killed by the Indians, (anno 1676,) in Chicopee, on the West side of the River.

‡ The Puritanic year, it is said, began with March, which they called first month. It appears that during the holy times of the "Grand Rebellion," it was thought profane to distinguish the months by those names of pagan original which they had formerly borne, though after the restoration of King Charles 2d, the good puritans were constrained to conform to the ancient usage in this respect.

† Her maiden name was Prudence Gilbert. N. H. M.

3044 Lydia, born 2d month, 8th day, 1654.
3045 Hannah, born 2d month, 11th day, 1656.
3046 Mercy, born 5th month, 18th day, 1658.

[Prudence Gilbert,] first wife of Miles Morgan, died 11th month, 14th day, 1660.

Sergeant [Miles] Morgan and Elizabeth Bliss were married February 15, 1669.

3047 Nathaniel, their son, was born June 14th, 1671.

Miles Morgan died May 28th, 1699.

The age of this old patriarch at the time of his decease is not mentioned in the records. But if our preceding calculations respecting his age are correct, he was born about the year 1615, and consequently was eighty-four years old when he died.

The children of Miles Morgan by his first wife, settled in different parts of the town of Springfield, on the East side of the River. Some of his descendants were among the first planters of Brimfield, in which, and the neighboring towns, they have a numerous and respectable progeny.

Nathaniel, (3047) the only child of Miles Morgan by his second marriage, was born as just mentioned, June 14th, 1671. He was married to Hannah Bird, January 19th, 1691, when he was but nineteen years of age. He settled on the West side of the River, (West Springfield,) in what is called Chicopee Street, on the lot at present occupied by Mr. N. Loomis, on the East side of the Street, where he lived to the age of eighty-one years, and died August 30th, 1752. Mrs. Morgan, his wife, died June 7th, 1751, at the age of ——.

He had seven sons and two daughters. All the sons and one of the daughters lived to the age of seventy years, and some of them were much older at their decease. Their names were, 3048 Nathaniel, born Feb. 16th, 1692.

3049 Samuel, born 1694, died Dec. 1799.
3050 Ebenezer, born 1696.
3051 Hannah, born 1698.
3052 Miles, born 1700.
3053 Joseph, born Dec. 3d, 1702, m. Mary Stebbins.
3054 James, born 1705.
3055 Isaac, born 1708, died 7th Nov. 1796.
3056 Elizabeth, born 1710.

These all married and settled in what is now the first parish in West Springfield, excepting one daughter, who died young. They possessed some of the finest farms in that parish, but these are now mostly occupied by other hands, their descendants having removed to other parts, so that there are not more than two or three families of the name remaining in that parish. Sic tempora mutant.

Mr. Joseph Morgan, (3053) my paternal grandfather, was born Dec. 3d, 1702, old style. In May, 1735, he married Mary Stebbins, (daughter of Mr. Benjamin Stebbins,) who was born July 6th, 1712. They lived many years in the old parish, where seven of their children were born. In 1751, they removed to the North parish, in West Springfield, (as it is at present called.) At that time there were not more than seven or eight families in what now constitutes that large parish. They settled upon a farm completely new, upon which they passed the remainder of their lives.

They had six sons and two daughters, viz.

3057 Joseph, born Feb. 19th, 1736, m. Experience Smith.
3058 Titus, who died an infant.
3059 Titus, 2d, born July 19th, 1740, married Sarah Morgan.
3060 Lucas, born Feb. 26, 1743, m. Tryphene Smith.
3061 Elizabeth, born Dec. 23d, 1745, m. Thomas White.
3062 Judah, born March 22d, 1749, m. Elizabeth Shivoy.
3063 Jesse, twin of Judah, m. Mercy Stebbins.
3064 Hannah, born Nov. 29th, 1751, m. John Legg.

Mr. Joseph Morgan, Sen. (3053) died of phthisis, Nov. 7th, 1773, in the 72d year of his age. His wife long survived him. She died Dec. 7th, 1798, aged 86 years. Their children entered the connubial state as follows:

Joseph, (3057) married Experience Smith, dau. of Mr. David Smith, Sept. 9th, 1765, by whom he had six daughters and one son. Two of the daughters died in childhood; the rest of the family are living.

Titus, (3059) married Sarah Morgan, (3076) dau. of Mr Ebenezer Morgan, of Springfield, May 19th, 1763. They have eight sons and one daughter, who are all living.

Lucas, (3060) married Tryphene Smith, a sister of the preceding, Dec. 21st, 1768, and by her had eight children, four sons and four daughters. Of this number he has lost two daughters and one son, who, as well as their mother, died of phthisis. After the death of his first wife, which happened Feb. 20th, 1793, he married Betsey Eastman, daughter of Mr. William Eastman, of Granby, July 9th, 1794, and by her he has a daughter and a son.

Elizabeth, (3061) married Thomas White, of South Hadley, May 29th, 1771; she died April 12th, 1782, leaving four sons and one daughter.

Judah, (3062) married Elizabeth Shivoy, April 12th, 1775, by whom he had four sons, (two of whom only are now living,) and one daughter.

Jesse, (3063) married Mercy Stebbins, of Deerfield, Feb. 2d, 1804; she, dying June 8th, 1806, he married Widow Hannah Stebbins, of the same place, Nov. 28th 1806. He has two children.

Hannah, (3064) married John Legg, Dec. 25th, 1782, by whom she has five children.

Five sons and one daughter of Joseph (3053) and Mary are still living; most of them have grand-children; the three eldest, a numerous train of them, and rapidly increasing.

Mr. Ebenezer Morgan, (3072) my maternal grrndfather, was grandson of Miles Morgan, (3039) and the son of David, (3041) the second son of said Miles. This David was born, according to the Springfield records, as before quoted, "7th month, 23d day, 1648." He married Mary Clark, about 1673, by whom he had a large family, viz.

CHILDREN OF DAVID, (3041.)

3065 Prudence, born 1674.
3066 Peletiah, born 1677.
3067 David, born 1679.
3068 Abigail, born 1681.
3069 John, born 1682.
3070 Jonathan, born 1685.
3071 Mercy or Mary, born ——
3072 Ebenezer, born March 7th, 1692, m. Mary Horton.
3073 Benjamin, born 1695.

Mr. Ebenezer Morgan, (3072) was born March 7th, 1692. He married Mary Horton, January, 1719, and settled as a farmer, at the "North End" of the town of Springfield. He lost his wife in 1736, who died without children. His second wife was Sarah Warner, (my grandmother,) to whom he was married June 20th, 1737. She was born Feb. 2d, 1710. They had two sons and three daughters, viz.

3074 Ebenezer, born June 12th, 1738, m. Miriam Kilbourn.
3075 Samuel, born Feb. 2d, 1740, m. Abigail Cooley.
3076 Sarah, born Nov. 18th, 1742, married Titus Morgan, (3059.)
3077 Catharine, born Dec. 31st, 1744, m. Moses Cooley.
3078 Chloe, born Oct. 14th, 1747, m. John Burt.

These are all living, and are connected in matrimonial life in the following manner:

Ebenezer, (3074) married Miriam Kilbourn, Feb. 1766, and by her had six sons and two daughters.

Samuel, (3075) married Abigail Cooley, Nov. 1766, by whom he has seven daughters and one son.

Sarah, (3076) married Titus Morgan, (3059) as has already been mentioned.

Catharine, (3077) married Moses Cooley, May, 1763, by whom she had five children. He dying in 1777, she was married to James Melvin Jan. 1779, by whom she had three children.

Chloe, (3078) was married to Mr. John Burt, May 10th, 1782, and by him has had four children, of which number she has lost a son and a daughter.

Among the earlier planters on the West side of the River, in the present town of Springfield, was Peletiah Morgan, (3066) eldest son of David Morgan, whom we have just mentioned. He settled upon the lot now occupied by Capt. Eldredge, at the South end of Chicopee Street. But none of his posterity are now remaining in that town, and not more than two or three families of the descendants of Nathaniel Morgan, (3047) as has been observed, are to be found in the old parish. There are still, however, a number of families in the North parish, who are descended from Joseph Morgan, (3053) his son. In Springfield, also, the ancient seat of the family, where the race was once numerous, two, or at most three, families only remain. Thus the posterity of Miles Morgan are "scattered abroad." They are very numerous, however. They are dispersed in different parts of New England, Vermont, New York, &c.

Mr. Titus Morgan, (3059) and Sarah Morgan, (3076) my parents, the former of whom was born, as has been already mentioned, July 19th, 1740; the latter, Nov. 18th, 1742; were joined in matrimony May 19th, 1763. Their children consist of eight sons and one daughter, viz.

3079 Erastus, b. March 29th, 1764, Thursday, m. Clarissa Chapin.
3080 Gaius, b. Jan. 14th, 1766, Tuesday, m. Abigail Austin.
3081 Quartus, twin of Gaius, m. Lorane Tuttle.
3082 Julius, born Feb. 17th, 1768, Wednesday, m. Azubah Day.
3083 Pliny, born Feb. 11th, 1770, Sunday, m. Lucretia Austin.
3084 Archippus, born May 17th, 1772, Sunday, m. Pamelia Taylor.
3085 Titus, born Dec. 23d, 1776, Monday, m. Mary Spencer.
3086 Sally, born May 21st, 1779, Friday, m. Joseph Day.
3087 Hiram, born June 21st, 1781, Thursday, m. Martha Montague.

They are all living in the matrimonial state, which they entered into in the following order.

Erastus, (3079) married Clarissa Chapin, of West Springfield, Dec. 31st, 1789. She was born December 23d, 1764.

Gaius, (3080) married Abigail Austin, of Northampton, January, 1791.

Quartus, (3081) married Lorana Tuttle, of West Springfield, October 29th, 1789.

Julius, (3082) married Azubah Day, of West Springfield, January 4th, 1798.

Pliny, (3083) married Lucretia Austin, sister of the preceding Abigail, April 30th, 1795.

Archippus, (3084) married Pamelia Taylor, of Montgomery, September 25th, 1800.

Titus, (3085) married Mary Spencer, of Middletown, Conn. July 5th, 1807.

Sally, (3086) married Joseph Day, jun. of West Springfield, January 14th, 1802.

Hiram, (3087) married Martha Montague, of Norwich, Conn. September 22d, 1808.

Some of these have large families of children; all have posterity but the writer of this. He and his consort were once blessed with a little son, who was born Saturday, May 25th, 1808, and whom they named Titus Junius. His continuance, however, in this "vale of tears," was but transient. On Sunday, the 23d of April, 1809, this infantile flower was translated from earth, to "bloom in the garden above." "Of such is the kingdom of Heaven."

Erastus, (3079) and wife, Clarissa, have the following children, viz.

3088 Calvin, born Oct. 20th, 1790.
3089 Clarissa, born Sept. 23d, 1793.
3090 Warren, born Sept. 16th, 1796.
3091 Lewis, born March 20th, 1801.
3092 Huldah, born Sept. 15th, 1803.
3093 Quartus Miles, born June 17th, 1810.

The children of Gaius, (3080) and Abigail, of Steuben, state of New York, are, 3094 Chauncey, born Feb. 13th, 1791.

3095 Augustus, born Aug. 10th, 1793.
3096 Julius, born Aug. 1st, 1796.
3097 Sophronia, born March 9th, 1799.
3098 Harriet, born May 10th, 1802.
3099 Albert Carleton, born July 17th, 1804.

Quartus, (3081) and Lorana, had six children, viz.

3100 Laura, born Feb. 12th, 1790, died March 1st, 1804, age 14.
3101 Lovisa, born Dec. 15th, 1791.
3102 Quartus, born Nov. 24th, 1793, died June 6th, 1808, age 15.
3103 Elenora, born Oct. 12th, 1802, died Jan. 19th, 1804.
3104 Laura, 2d, born Nov. 18th, 1804.
3105 James Burt, born Oct. 26th, 1806.

My brother, QUARTUS MORGAN, (3081) departed this life March 1st, 1810. He died of a fever, after an illness of nine or ten days, ætat 44, ann. "In the midst of life we are in death."

JULIUS, (3082) and Azubah, have the following children.

3106 Henry Lee, born Jan. 27th, 1799.
3107 Adams, born Nov. 6th, 1800.

3111 Sophia, born Aug. 28th, 1809.

PLINY MORGAN, (3083) was married to Lucretia Austin, at Steuben, N Y. April 30th, 1795. They are settled at Boonville, on Black River. Their children are, 3112 Portius, born Aug. 13th, 1797.

3113 Clymene, born Feb. 15th, 1800.
3114 Pliny W. born June 30th, 1802.
3115 Titus, born Nov. 19th, 1804.
3116 Lucretia, Dec. 23d, 1807.

The family of ARCHIPPUS, (3084) and Pamelia, consists of the following children.

3117 Harriet, born June 27th, 1801.

FROM NOTES OF N. H. M.

JOSEPH, (3131) m. Sally Spencer, of Middletown, Conn.; settled in Hartford, Conn. and was a renowned Hotel-keeper there for many years. He died there in the summer of 1847, age 67, leaving three children, and a very large estate.

CHILDREN.

3151 MARY, dau. of Joseph, (3128) m. Rev. James A. Smith, a Congregational clergyman, now residing in Unionville, (Farmington, Conn.;) has had ten children, but only four surviving, viz.

3155 Sophia Tracey Smith, a minor.

3156 LUCY, dau. of Joseph, married James Goodwin, Esq. of Hartford; settled and still residing there. He was for many years the popular President of the eminently prosperous and widely known "Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Co." They have three children, viz.—

CHILDREN.

3161 John Pierpont, born 17 April, 1837, resides in N. Y. city, of the firm of Dabney, Morgan & Co. bankers, has been twice married.

3164 Junius Spencer, Jr. born 6th April, 1846, died young, age about 12.

3165 Juliet Pierpont, born 4th Dec. 1847.

As this marriage of George H. and Sarah S. (3162) appears to be the first and only known intermarriage between the two lines of James and Miles, brothers, except perhaps the one noted on page 240, it may be interesting to trace the degree of kinship between the parties.

LYDIA, (3044) dau. of Miles, m. John Pierce, in 1677.

HANNAH, (3045) dau. of Miles, m. Samuel Terry, of Enfield. N. Goodwin, in his "Genealogical Notes," says this was the first marriage in Springfield. It may be the first which appears on record, but could hardly have been the first in fact. She died 7th Jan. 1698, age 42.

The following is found among the papers of Titus Morgan, without quotation or other credit mark, and therefore presumed to be original. I do not remember to have seen it in print, but deem it worthy of presentation to the family as a token that the minstrel's art "to charm by the magic of sweet numbers" is not altogether alien to our family. N. H. M.

A Fragment

Addressed to James Currie, M. D., F. R. S. of Liverpool, on his edition of the works of Robert Burns, for the benefit of the widow and family of that immortal bard.

See plenty exults in her green waving blade,
As the light breeze sweeps gently along,
And labor reclines in the soft, easy shade,
Where the red-breast awakes his sweet song.
How beauteous the landscape when summer is drest
With a cestus of roses so gay;
But ah! when shall Scotia with pleasure be blessed,
Since her Burns sleeps so cold in his clay.

Expands not the breast when the sounds of delight
Are heard at the still hour of eve?
When the villagers sport by the moon's silver light,
The day's wasting cares to relieve?
His too, was the rapture such themes could impart,
As the rustic maids chanted his lay,
For sympathy strung the fine chords of his heart,
But that heart now lies cold in its clay.

From his country's blue hills, while the sun's golden beam Gives life to all nature around,
Or through her lone glen winds the serpentine stream,
Shall the voice of her minstrel resound.
When love, with light heart, steals unseen to the bower,
His strains shall fresh transports convey—
For his spirit shall reign in that dear, blissful hour,
Though his body lies cold in the clay.

Fancy wove the rich web of his vision, divine,
With the rays of the soft blushing morn;
His path, nature strewed with her wild flowers so fine,
And the dew, trembling, hung on the thorn.
The painted trout leap'd from the smooth gliding Ayr,
The lambkins danced, sporting away,
While his lyre breathed the notes that his soul could ensnare,
But now he lies cold in his clay.

And still o'er the mountains and through the deep vale,
As he sung of his Scotia so dear,
Want hung on his footsteps to tell her sad tale,
For his Jane and her offspring were near.
Ye fathers who feel, and ye sons who can love,
Your regard to his orphans display,
And with Currie's warm heart your kind sympathies prove,
Since the minstrel sleeps cold in the clay.

BRIEF NOTICES

OF OTHER EARLY EMIGRANTS, OF THE

NAME OF MORGAN;

BUT WHETHER ANY OF THEM WERE OF THE SAME ORIGINAL STOCK FROM WHICH OUR ANCESTOR, JAMES, OF NEW LONDON, WAS DESCENDED, IS NOT KNOWN.

RICHARD (ROSE) MORGAN, of New London, 1679, in that part now Waterford; died 1698. His widow, Hopestill, died 1st June, 1712. He left three sons, John, Richard and Benjamin, and several daughters. The appellative (Rose) was currently applied to him and many of his descendants, probably, to distinguish them from the family of our James. I have notes of many of his descendants, and there is such a correspondence in baptismal names, as strongly indicates a kinship between this family and the family of James. Great caution has been necessary in tracing the descendants of James, to keep the two lines distinct.

BENNETT, Plymouth, came over in the "Fortune," 1621; went from Plymouth, probably, before 1627, as he did not share there in division of cattle, but where to not known.

JAMES, of Boston, had sons, David, born 10th Nov. 1676, and Jonathan, 19th Nov. 1680: perhaps the James whose high temper, under the influence of intoxication, cost him his life, March 11th, 1686, at the age of 30, as mentioned by Rev. Cotton Mather, in his "Magnalia," Vol. II. page 351, [or Book VI. p. 40–43, as cited by Savage, probably from another edition,] but who is nevertheless, described as a man of more than common intelligence and culture, and not actuated by malice or depraved habits. I can perhaps better afford an allusion to this case, than to be suspected by the eagle-eyed antiquarians, of a studied purpose to suppress it. He was not at all of our ancestral stock; no one of whose names has ever shown a tarnished record, although in those early days the most trivial delinquencies were rigidly noticed.

JOSEPH, of Lynn, Mass. m. Deborah Hart, 12th July, 1669.

MOSES, a soldier under Capt. Turner, at Hadley, Mass. 1676.

RICHARD, Dover, N. H. 1659, probably same man of Exeter, 1684.

ROGER, Charlestown, Mass. died 23d Dec. 1675.

SAMUEL, Marblehead, 1674.

WILLIAM, New Hampshire, 1665, probably same one in Amesbury, Mass. 1677.

ROBERT, Saco, perhaps Kennebec; see "Sullivan," page 287.

FRANCIS, Kittery, Maine, 1664, administrator on estate of Capt. John Mitchell, 1665.

OWEN, New Haven, Conn. m. widow Joan Bryan, 1650; was in Norwalk, 1656.

ROBERT, Salem, Mass. 1637; admitted to church, 1650; had children, Samuel, Luke, Joseph, Benjamin, (all four baptized 23d June, 1650;) Robert, Jr. baptized 15th Dec. 1650; Bethia, baptized 29th May, 1653; Aaron, baptized 24th May, 1663, and Moses. His wife, Margaret, and all these eight children, except Luke and Aaron, are named in his will, 14th Jan. 1672; will proved June, 1673.

JAMES, came from Wales, about 1700; settled in what is now the town of Eastchester, Westchester Co. N. Y.; died there, about 1764, the date of his will; had sons, James and Caleb, and probably other children. I have notes of several of these descendants, in N. Y. state.

EBENEZER, came from England, and settled in Rhode Island, about 1750; had four sons, (and perhaps daughters.) Nathaniel m. Eleanor Randall; five children; settled and died in Voluntown, Conn.; Peter m. Martha Lewis; settled in Central New York; four children; Seth, m. Desire Bromley; settled in Norwich, Conn.; two children; has descendants still living there; and Wheeler, settled and died in Voluntown; four sons, (perhaps daughters;) one of his sons, William A. and grandson, John A. still living in Norwich, Conn.

HOWELL, 1637, is mentioned in a recent paper of the Maryland Historical Society, as one of the colonists settled at that date, at Kent Island, in Chesapeake Bay, but no further account is given.

Who was William Morgan, the Martyr of Antimasonic notoriety? In my researches I have watched for his appearance, as a descendant, either from some one of our lines from James, or from some other line of the name, but have never found the least clue to his ancestry. His origin appears shrouded in as deep mystery as his exit.

It may be interesting to recall some of the incidents of this remarkable case. He was a printer in Batavia, N. Y. and a Freemason of high degree. In the autumn of 1826 it became known that he was privately printing for publication, a book disclosing the secrets of the masonic order, in violation of his own oaths and obligations as a member. A few overzealous and unscrupulous masons, dressed in disguise and wearing masks. suddenly, one evening, seized him; forced him into a close carriage; drove off rapidly to Lake Ontario, and probably sunk him in its depths; as he was never seen or heard of afterwards. A wild excitement was at once kindled into a flame in the community, which rapidly spread throughout the Union. An "Antimasonic Party" sprung into existence, so intense in its energy as to nearly override all other issues; controlling the popular elections in several of the States, and influencing largely, if not controlling, the next succeeding Presidential canvass. The origin of all that class of statutes, prohibiting the administration of "extra-judicial oaths," now existing in several of the States, may be traced to this event. Large rewards were offered by various public authorities, and private associations, for the discovery of his body, or of the parties guilty of his abduction, but, strangely enough, without securing either object. Numerous prosecutions were commenced against every suspected person, and some were convicted on trivial charges, remotely connected with the abduction; but no direct or serious charge was ever sustained.

The public press of the day, teemed with a thousand varying rumors concerning him; sometimes that his body had been found, here, or there; sometimes that he had been seen alive in Smyrna, Japan, or elsewhere, but no authentic tidings ever came to light. The latest published report was, that he was spoken by the ship "Flying Dutchman," at sea, alone in a stone canoe, with a cast iron paddle, sculling himself around Cape Horn, at the rate of thirty miles an hour; but even this was rather discredited by the public, and it was generally believed that he was murdered, and his body sunk in the Lake.
